Anyone who has lost a loved one knows there's no finish line to grieving. Feelings may change over time, but they never really go away.

That, however, hasn't stopped the Lyons family from crossing finish lines for grief ever since Joe Lyons suffered a fatal heart attack during the swim portion of the first Cohasset

More cities adopt CPA

By Gerry Tuoti | gtuoti@wickedlocal.com

Voters in a growing number of Massachusetts cities and towns are raising their own taxes in the name of preserving their communities, but that trend is putting considerable strain on a state program that matches the locally raised funds.

Electric vehicles

Town in the fast lane for grant

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

The Alternative Energy Committee's venture to bring electric cars to Cohasset is running as efficiently as the vehicles they hope to lease.

The topic appeared on a handful of commission agendas this spring, and the Town has decided to go forward with it. Massachusetts is currently running an electric vehicle incentive program, which offers towns $7,500 to lease or purchase an electric vehicle and $7,500 to install one to two charging stations.

The grant is "first come first served," so the committee didn't want to wait long before filing. They have determined during this spring's meetings that the town has enough need for municipal electric vehicles to make the grant pay off, even if the details of who gets which vehicle aren't set in stone yet.

The schools could use a vehicle for around-town travel and meal transport, for which they currently reimburse employees on a mileage basis. The Fire Department wants one for inspections and for traveling to conferences. They currently use a gas-guzzling SUV, according to the chief.

Elder Affairs has also shown interest in a vehicle that could be used for transporting people to appointments. It's

GOVERNMENT

Town leaders review successes, look ahead

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

With the crush of Annual Town Meeting and elections behind, Cohasset leaders took advantage of the lull to bask in the past year's victories, with an eye to the fiscal year ahead this week.

In fiscal 2016, selectmen worked with Town Manager Chris Senior to progress in four focal categories: communications strategies, financial stability, building and infrastructure assessment, and the advancement of Town priorities such as the senior center, completed and purchased this year.

To improve communications, the Town dedicated staff and systems to standardize both internal and external communications. It rolled out "Cohasset Connects" on the website so that residents could report things like potholes and public hazards. It expanded fiscal forecasting forums and launched a Town Facebook page.

In the coming years, the Town looks forward to implementing a municipal fiber loop to improve connectivity, the new switches and servers necessary for the fiber loop's function, and a new, mobile-friendly website.

To improve financial stability, Cohasset took a good hard look at liabilities, such as the underfunded Other Post-Employment Benefits account, and financial and fraud protection policies. The Town achieved a AAA bond rating from Standard and Poor's and just received a certificate of achievement for excellence in financial reporting from the Government Finance Officers Association of America.

Going forward, the Town still has a long way to go toward being able to support post-employment benefits promised to retired Town employees and teachers, so that's likely to show up again as a fiscal 2017 goal, officials said.

To assess building and infrastructure, Cohasset partnered with the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC) to analyze space needs for municipal programs and services. Long-term building and infrastructure improvement and maintenance plans should be forthcoming in early fiscal 2017.

The Town also took advantage of grants from the MAPC to support the creation of a new Master Plan, from Green Communities to support alternative energy initiatives, and from Blue Cross/Blue Shield to support wellness in the workplace for Town employees.

Selectmen say the long-discussed Affordable Housing Trust should finally come to life at the outset of fiscal 2017.

With the new fiscal year around the corner, the time has come to look ahead to next year's goals, which will be discussed at an upcoming meeting of the Board of Selectmen.

APPOINTMENTS

Volunteer government starting to take shape

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

The public chose its elected officials in May. Now it's time for the elected to make appointments and reappointments to non-elected positions, which comprise most of the town's volunteer government. On Monday, June 20th, Troika (a committee comprised of the Advisory Committee chairman, selectmen chair and Town Moderator) reappointed Tanya Bodell and Richard Fitzpatrick to three-year terms on the Advisory Committee, which provides information and insight to the Board of Selectmen.

To the Capital Budget Committee, Troika reappointed Sam Wakeman and Brian Host to three-year terms. It appointed Nathan Redmann to fill the vacancy left by Jack Keniley, who was just elected to the Board of Selectmen, expiring in 2018. John Donohue was appointed to an associate member vacancy for a term expiring in 2017.

All incumbent members of the Alternative Energy Committee were reappointed to one-year terms. Margaret Cotter was reappointed to a three-year term on the Design Review Board.

The selectmen made reappointments the following night on Tuesday, June 21st. To the Cable Advisory Committee, they reappointed Pat Martin, Merle Brown, and Jim Morrison to one-year terms. Martin and Brown were also reappointed to one-year terms on the CCTV Board of Directors.

Can Tiriyaki, Peter Wood, Yasmin Landy, and

Jacqueline Clark were reappointed to three-year terms on the Cohasset Common Historic District Commission. Michael Reilly was reappointed to the Cohasset Cultural Council.

Diane Kennedy, Richard Karoff, and Alex Koinos will each serve three more years with the Community Preservation Committee. Cynthia Swartwood and James Mensching will return for three more years on the Council of Elder Affairs.

Annette Sawchuk and Glenn Pratt have been reappointed as fence viewers, whose role it is to assess and resolve property disputes. Peter Wood and Jacqueline Dormitzer have been reappointed to three-year terms on the Historical Commission.

Carl Forsythe and Jason Soules were reappointed to one-year terms on the OPEB committee, which aims to manage the liability of "Other Post-Employment Benefits" promised to retired Town employees and teachers. Merle Brown will serve another three-year term with South Shore Recycling.

To the Zoning Board of Appeals, selectmen reappointed Charlie Higginson, David McMorris, and Matthew Walkins to three-year terms. Selectmen will handle new appointments and follow up on a handful of reappointments that could not be completed this week at their meeting on Tuesday, June 29th. Both new and returning committee members will be sworn in shortly afterward.

POLICE BEAT

Alleged drunken driver tries to evade police

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

An on-duty officer, who was using his own vehicle, noted that the 2016 Dodge Charger traveling behind him on Route 3A near Sohler Street was being operated erratically as they headed north around 1:45 p.m. on Thursday (June 16). The officer said the Charger was following much too closely, only feet from his rear bumper, and swerved onto the soft shoulder and back again in heavy traffic.

The officer, who was wearing his police Polo shirt, badge, police belt and weapon -- so he was clearly identifiable as a police officer -- stopped near the train station, got out and approached the Charger. As he approached, the Charger turned right onto the grass and went around the officer's car and back onto 3A north. The officer called for assistance and could see the Charger, which was stuck in heavy beach traffic.

At the intersection of Route 3A and Route 228, the Charger went around several vehicles, turned right over the traffic island and onto Hull Street. Cohasset notified Hull police.

The Charger eventually pulled into the Hull police station where Cohasset placed the operator under arrest for drunken driving.

Police said, Russell D. Field, 31, of 25 James Way, Scituate, had alcohol on his breath, was argumentative and uncooperative and there were two open containers of 24-ounce Twisted Tea in the console of the car. Field was charged with operating under the influence of liquor, failure to stop for a police officer and failure to drive in marked lanes.

MVC

The 24-year-old Weymouth man driving a 2009 Nissan Murano said a deer darted out as he was making a left onto Sohler Street from Route 3A at around 8:30 a.m. on Thursday (June 16), causing him to veer off the road and into a utility pole behind Feng Shui.

Police said there was major damage to the Nissan, which had to be towed. The driver was evaluated by paramedics but declined medical treatment. He was issued a citation for failure to drive in marked lanes.

MVC

Police responded to a two-car accident in front of 3A Pizza on King Street (Route 3A) on Tuesday (June 14) around 4 p.m. A 2013 BMW SUV, operated by a 34-year-old Marshfield woman, had pulled out of a parking space and was in a queue to exit onto 3A when hit by a 2003 Nissan sedan backing out of another space. A 23-year-old Quincy man was operating the Nissan. The mishap was off the public way so no citations were issued.

Hit & run

A witness notified police about a 2012 Toyota Highlander that backed out of an angled parking spot on S. Main Street in the village striking the unoccupied 2015 Mazda SUV parked next to it. Police said the Highlander, which was operated by a 51-year-old Scituate woman, cut the wheels too much and sideswiped the Mazda. The right passenger side of the Highlander hit the Mazda, which was owned by a 65-year-old Cohasset woman.

The witness provided a plate number and police caught up with the Scituate woman at her home. She explained that emergency vehicles with sirens blaring were passing as she was pulling out and she did not realize she hit the other vehicle. There was minor damage to both cars and the matter will be settled through the women's respective insurance companies.

MV stop/tow

On officer on traffic patrol stopped a 2012 Honda Accord with an expired registration sticker on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near Shaw's on Wednesday morning (June 15). The 42-year-old Marshfield woman behind the wheel could not renew online due to unpaid fees or excise tax, police said. Her car was towed and she was issued a $105 citation for driving an unregistered motor vehicle.

MV stop/tow

An officer on traffic patrol pulled over a 2007 Toyota Highlander on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near Schofield Road on Wednesday (June 15) around 2 p.m. The 48-year-old Marshfield woman behind the wheel could not renew online due to unpaid fees or excise tax. She was issued a $105 citation for unregistered operation and her vehicle was towed.

House cat

An Elm Court resident notified police about what she thought was a fisher cat that was curled up between her house and the neighbor's. She tried to scare the animal to no avail. As it turned out the cat was a house cat. Fisher cats, which are wild animals, are actually not felines at all but are part of the weasel family. They usually avoid human contact but have been known to attack pets and on rare occasions, people.

Construction

A Jerusalem Road resident complained to police on Monday (June 13) about construction vehicles parked on edge of his property and wanted the worker arrested for trespassing. Police said there is work going on and the vehicle was not on the caller's property.

Property dispute

There is an ongoing property line dispute between neighbors on Sohler Street. Last week police were called by one of the property owners about their neighbor having bushes planted where the property line is located. The matter was referred to the building inspector.

Youth complaint

Police did not catch up with a group of youths who were reported by a concerned caller as possibly drinking on Reed's Beach across from Linden Drive on Monday evening (June 13).

Tripped

A concerned caller reported that a man was breaking into a closed business on Thursday evening (June 16) in the village. As it turned out the owner, who was checking on the business, tripped and fell through the glass door. He was badly cut and transported to the hospital.

Lost brakes

A newspaper deliveryman in a 2008 Chrysler Sebring lost his brakes as he was backing down a driveway on Aaron River Road around 7:13 a.m. on Thursday (June 16) and went over a small cliff. The car had to be towed. He was cited for failure to use caution and defective equipment. Police found one of the car's brake pads on the driveway. The driver is a 55-year-old Quincy man.

Hydrant used

Police notified the town manager about a construction company's street sweeper using one of the fire hydrants in the new development on Hickory Circle off Beechwood Street last week. The street sweeper is out of Worcester and the driver was a 28-year-old Worcester man, police said. Police responded after receiving a call from a resident about the hydrant being used.

Rear-ended

Police responded to a two-car accident on King Street (Route 3A) by Sunrise around noontime on Sunday (June 18). A 2013 Lexus sedan, operated by a 49-year-old Hingham man, had slowed in traffic while heading north and was hit from behind by a 2013 Volkswagen sedan, operated by a 48-year-old Scituate man.

Both cars had to be towed. The seven-year-old twins in the Volkswagen were checked out and were OK. There were no injuries. The Scituate man was cited for following too closely on a state highway.

Hit & run

A Cohasset caller reported a red car with its back bumper taped was pulling into driveways in the 300 block of King Street, hitting parked cars and leaving. The incident was reported around 8:23 a.m. on Sunday (June 18). Investigation found the driver is a contractor with the Boston Globe making his deliveries and was having trouble stopping. Police contacted the Globe that will work with the delivery contractor to find out what is going on.

Romeo & Juliet

A concerned resident notified police on Saturday (June 18) that her daughter had found a handwritten note with a strange message on it on the school bus last week. The mother looked it up and it is a quote from Romeo & Juliet. She found it disturbing and asked to see an officer.

Back in April, the New England electric auto association hosted an Earth Day electric/hybrid vehicle gathering at the Hingham Public Library where enthusiasts checked out the earth-friendly cars. If the Alternative Energy Committee has its way, electric cars for some town departments will be coming soon to Cohasset.

impractical to drive the large van for just one passenger, as they do now.

The grant application therefore requests three electric vehicles and two charging stations. Alternative Energy Chairman Shaun Selha explained that one of the stations would be split into two smaller stations, allowing for a total of three charging locations -- one each at Willcutt Commons, the public safety building, and the high school.

The school and fire departments test drove the Nissan Leaf and felt that it would suit their needs. At a monthly lease payment of $60, the Leaf would fall comfortably within the $100 monthly limit set by the Town. Gas reimbursement and maintenance savings will offset the cost of lease payments.

Since it's still early in the incentive program, Selha anticipates a quick response to the grant application. Look for more on this issue in early July.

LYONS

Triathlon in 2007. Joe was racing to benefit the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation because his and Karen's son Sam had been diagnosed with diabetes at the age of two.

The first year after it happened, Karen knew she had to finish what her husband had started. "It bothered me so much that Joe hadn't finished it," she said.

So Karen did the Tri that year in 2008, start to finish. And she didn't do it alone. Together with 55 members of her family, friend circle, and neighborhood in Newton, she raised close to $150,000. Team Lyons was a top fundraiser that year, neck-and-neck with their friendly rivals in Sarah's Soldiers.

"It was amazing," Karen remembers. "It was healing for all of us. It felt so good that I had to go back and do it again, and everybody came back the next year."

"In the first couple years, we had a hundred people," remembers Sam. "Watching them go by, every other person was part of our team. That was really special. I saw the power of community there."

This went on until Karen and Sam moved to San Francisco in 2011. They'd tried everything to make their home into a place to call their own instead of a place that rang with the echoes of Joe. But repainting, re-landscaping, and remodeling bathrooms couldn't remodel their memories.

"I couldn't quite move forward," Karen said. "I needed to prove to myself that I still could."

She returned to San Francisco, where she and Joe had first met, and began to establish a life where both she and Sam would be able to thrive, even – or rather, especially – after it came time for Sam, now a high school sophomore, to go to college.

They've come back to do the Tri once or twice since then. After Karen remarried, she brought her husband, Dan Aaronson, to Cohasset with her, and he did his first triathlon in Joe's honor.

This year, Sam and Karen are back again. Karen will ride in the cycling leg of the race, partly in memory of Joe and partly in honor of her friend who recently suffered a traumatic brain injury due to a bike accident.

"I thought it would be great if I put her bike back on the road," said Karen.

It hasn't escaped her notice, of course, that this year marks not only the 10th anniversary of the triathlon, but also the 10th anniversary of the tragedy. It was an important year for her to come back.

"One thing that surprises me is that I still think about it every day," said Karen. "When Sam got diabetes, they told me there would come a day when I could smile and not worry about it...But Joe I still think about. I thought that would change, but now I realize that it probably won't."

For his part, Sam will be volunteering alongside his grandmother and aunt. He did the running portion of the race once, but for him, crossing the finish line isn't an important part of finding closure the way it was for his mom.

"I've come more to terms with it," Sam said. "I've lived half my life without him, so it's become more normal and reality. But it's still sad. I still miss my father and I'm still sad about it from time to time. He was really good at math; when I need help with homework, I wish he was around."

Karen, though, thinks Joe would have spent more time being proud of their son than he would have spent helping Sam with homework. After all, the high school sophomore is taking summer classes at Harvard on stem cell biology and the American presidency.

"Sam's six-foot-four now; he's growing into Joe," Karen said. "I'm so grateful for that. Joe doesn't get to see that, but he would be really proud of him. We've left a great legacy for Joe."

Cheer on Karen, Sam, and the rest of this year's triathletes on Sunday, June 26th from 7:45 to 10:45 a.m.

AROUND TOWN

Keeping summertime tidy in town

Summertime

Hey Cohasset guess what? Schools are out and it's officially SUMMER! However, the season comes regular reminders and "rules."

1. It is beach season as we all know (hooray!) so with that comes trash, trash and more trash! Please do not be the rude or entitled ones who feel that "your trash" won't stink if you leave it there! Clean up messes, trash, dirty diapers and Friday night fun/dinners. Rather than get all up in arms about it and deny it, we all just need to just plain do it, period!

2. Dogs! No words, finger pointing or anything. Leashes, shots, hot days/no leaving in cars, clean up the poop! End of story, be responsible or do not have a dog!

3. Kids need helmets, kids need rules on road, stranger danger and "what to do if?" Keep them moving this summer and enjoy time with them as much as you can, as they are young only once!

Library program

What a great way to expose children to something new, outside of school and not have the pressure of "grades."

The Introduction to Greek and Latin roots is being held at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Tuesdays, July, 5th, 12th,

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

19th and 26th from 11 a.m. to 12 p.m. Students in grades 5 and 6 are welcome. To register, go to @cohassetlibrary.org.

Graduate

Huge congratulations is being sent out to Grace McMeekin who graduated from the Williston Northampton School in Easthampton, Mass. on Sunday May 29, 2016.

A high honors student, Grace served as an Admissions Intern and English Tutor, and swam on the Varsity Girls Swim Team, which won the NEPSAC New England Championships this year. Grace will attend Elon University this fall. You have accomplished quite a bit Grace and your family and friends are so proud as they should be and we look forward to hearing more in the future.

Holy Cross

The following Cohasset students received degrees from the College of the Holy Cross at its 170th commencement on May 27.

■ Meghan Colleen Burke, received a bachelor of arts degree, cum laude.

■ John Joseph Collins, received a bachelor of arts degree.

■ Amanda Mary Farren, received a bachelor of arts degree.

Memories

DVD's of the CHS Senior Prom Red Carpet from Mary 26 are available to purchase for $20 each. Also DVD's of the CHS Graduation from June 4 are available to purchase for $20 each. To order DVD copies of both events please call Shaun Galvin at 781-424-2197(cell) or email your request to galvin_sm@hotmail.com Requests can also be mailed with a check for $20.00 per DVD to Shaun Galvin P.O. Box 526 Hingham, MA 02043. Checks should be made payable to Shaun Galvin.

That's the news this week Cohasset. Send in next weeks news by Tuesday at noon.

EMAIL: aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com

We look forward to hearing and sharing all of your graduation news, congratulation messages and photos. Send them all in, along with all the other Cohasset news each week no later than 5 p.m. on Tuesdays. Many colleges send news directly to us but others do not. We accept dean's list and graduation news from the colleges or the families of the students.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Breaking out from classical mode

By Karen Ji

I was astonished when I was offered an opportunity to perform Rhapsody in Blue by George Gershwin under Conductor Nicholas Palmer at South Shore Conservatory's Evenings Under the Stars summer concert series. I volunteered as an usher at last summer's festival orchestra concert, but it was unimaginable to me that I would ever be performing in the event. After going home and listening to the piece over and over, I was brimming over with excitement and couldn't wait to begin learning.

Throughout the years that I have been taking piano lessons at South Shore Conservatory, I have been given the opportunity to perform at various events, including with the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra twice under Conductor Steven Karidoyanes. Those performances enhanced my experience and I got chances to truly "perform" in front of a large crowd.

However, I am especially anticipating this performance because of how different the style of music is from previous pieces that I have played. As a strictly classical musician, I have always been taught very specific techniques to follow. I can express myself in classical music, but there are moments where room for expression is limited. Although it will be challenging to transition into a more laid back fashion, it will also give me a chance to adjust the music to my own preferences.

Having never played a large jazz-style piece before, I am looking forward to taking a break from what I normally play and letting loose and not following all of the rules that classical music comes with.

It has also been a very fun experience for me and my teacher HuiMin Wang to learn something out of the ordinary. During lessons, HuiMin often tells me to stop playing "like a student" and just enjoy the music. I am grateful to have such an enthusiastic and supportive teacher like HuiMin to discover this new style of music.

I invite you to join me on Saturday, July 9, at 7 p.m. in the Jane Carr Amphitheater at One Conservatory Drive, as South Shore Conservatory's Evenings Under the Stars Saturday evening concert series starts off its 20th anniversary season with the Evenings Under the Stars Festival Orchestra presents Let the Celebration Begin!. This special anniversary season celebrates the many talented artists within the conservatory family. Each Evenings Under the Stars performance features either a conservatory student or faculty performer. Little-known fact, -Maestro Palmer, a Hingham native, is a former South Shore Conservatory student!

For tickets or more information on Evenings Under the Stars performances, visit www.sscmusic.org, find South Shore Conservatory on Facebook, or call 781-749-7565, ext. 22.

Carillonneur Elizabeth Vitu leads off the summer carillon concert series at 6 p.m. on Sunday, June 26. COURTESY PHOTO

Summer Carillon Concert series to start

The St. Stephen's Episcopal Church Annual Summer Carillon Concert Series kicks off its 92nd continuous season with a concert by carillonneur Elizabeth Vitu at 6 p.m. on Sunday, June 26.

Elizabeth Vitu studied the carillon with Charles Chapman in Luray, Virginia for nine years, during which she often participated in work sessions with Johan Franco and LaSalle Spier. She pursued her carillon studies at Hollins University which created a music degree in carillon for her, and studied with James Leland, Roy Hamlin Johnson, John Diercks and had an internship with Milford Myhre.

Upon receiving her diploma with honors, she then studied for two years with Jacques Lannoy at the Ecole Française de Carillon in Douai. Elizabeth was named assistant-carillonneur of the Perpignan Cathedral from 1999-2005 and was named carillonneur by Episcopal decree as of January 1st 2006. She is also responsible for organizing the Perpignan International Carillon Festival.

She has edited, arranged and composed music for publication in both England and the United States. She is an active member of the British Carillon Society, the North American and French Guilds.

Under the auspices of John Diercks, she has compiled his personal thoughts on the musical structure of his carillon compositions in a booklet, including his resumé and excerpts of his compositions; this booklet was presented to European and American carillon schools, major libraries in the United States, and to several universities. She is now preparing another booklet, which concerns the life and music of British carillonneur and composer John Neff.

Elizabeth gives concerts throughout Europe and the United States. As well as her carillon position in Perpignan, she has recently been appointed Assistant Carillonneur in Carcassonne. For the first time in the history of the Perpignan Conservatory of Music, and upon initiative by the cathedral carillonneurs, a carillon class began in September 2010, with Elizabeth as professor.

Concerts will take place on Sunday evenings at 6 p.m. from Sunday, June 26 through Sunday, July 14th. All concerts are free and open to the public. The carillon can be enjoyed best from the Cohasset Town Common. Bring a blanket and a picnic or snack and listen to the bells as you enjoy the summer evening. Or come up and sit in the courtyard of the church. Either way, we hope you find our summer series exciting and fun. Hope to see you there!

5 THINGS TO DO THIS WEEK

1 AMATEUR RADIO DAY: Boston Amateur Radio Club and the Harvard Wireless Club have joined to participate in the annual Amateur Radio Relay League Field Day from 2 p.m. June 25 to 2 p.m. June 26 at the Bare Cove Fire Museum, 19 Fort Hill St., Hingham. Visitors can view the process at the Fire Museum as licensed operators use their personal and club radios to make contacts. Call 781-749-0028 for more information. Or visit: barecovefiremuseum.org.

2 ENVIRONMENT: Kids' Inspection Teams for the Environment, from 2 to 3:30 p.m. June 24 at Wompatuck State Park, Hingham. Explore a little-known site from Wompatuck's military past and learn how people can affect the environment. Visitors will be a team of environmental investigators assessing a potential hazardous waste site. This program begins at the Campground Contact Station; it's intended for adults and children 10+. The program may be canceled or modified due to weather. Call to confirm: 781-749-7160.

3 DOWNSIZING: On Wednesday, June 29, at 11 a.m., Cohasset Elder Affairs will welcome Gail Peterson Bell, Senior Vice President of Sotheby's

Real Estate, Adrienne Rowles, Wealth Advisor for Raymond James, as well as Stacy Sturdy and Kim Hansen, co-owners of Serene Spaces, professional home stagers. Free program, but please RSVP to 383-9112. If you are interested in staying for lunch afterward ($3), please contact CEA at least 24-hours in advance: 781-383-9112.

4 WALK: Healthy Heart Walk: 8-8:45 a.m. June 27 at Wompatuck State Park. A guided hike on the Healthy Heart Trail. The Healthy Heart Trail is about 1.5 miles long and is marked with green heart symbols. The loop is easy-to-moderate in difficulty and takes about 30 to 45 minutes to complete. This walk is intended for adults and older children. The program may be canceled or modified due to weather. Call to confirm: 781-749-7160.

5 SUSTAINABLE GARDEN TOUR: Third annual Sustainable Garden Tour: 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. June 25. Local gardeners from Scituate, Cohasset and Hull will open their gardens to guests. The Tour will focus on sustainable, naturally and organically maintained gardens. See up close how gardeners keep backyard chickens, care for beehives, grow fruit and utilize composting systems that feed their soil. Private homes, educational gardens at Holly Hill Farm, a Food Pantry garden and a Scituate school garden are featured. Tickets are $25 prior to June 25 and $30 the day of the tour. Tickets are available on the website. Attendees may pick up prepaid ticket or purchase in person at Holly Hill Farm. Children 18 and younger are free. ## Community spirit abounds on Thursdays

■ RING THAT BELL!

As she stood before the vendors and early birds to the Common last week, ready to ring the bell to officially open the Farmers Market, Taffy Nothnagle reflected on the community spirit Thursday afternoons on the Common has brought to the town each summer. As Cohasset's 2016 Citizen of the Year, Taffy is no stranger to community involvement, exemplifying the positive momentum and results that come from generosity of time and kindness done to benefit others.

■ THE MARKET

CAFÉ: After a stroll through the market for your produce, freshly caught fish, organic eggs, grass-fed beef, lamb, chicken, baked goods, breads, toffee, coffee, cookies and creative artisan craft – who wouldn't be a little hungry? The Farmers Market now offers an area of ready-to-eat or take-home food items. Newcomer Fire it Up Flatbreads made its debut last week, enticing market goers with the open wood aroma of pizza. Southern Barbeque, Middle Eastern specialties, Chowder, Lobster Rolls, and skewers are also available, with an ice cold lemonade from Del's to top it off. Relax at the tables and chairs while you listen to the Market Musician of the day! This week's new group: the duo of Ken Warner & Jim Gallagher of Boomerang.

■ PLAY & STAY: Starting on Thursday, June 30th and running for six weeks, is the Cohasset Recreation Department's Concert Series, starting at 6 or 6:30 p.m. June 30th Concert: Rusty Skippers – Jack Worley Memorial Veterans Concert 6:30 p.m. Enjoy the market beforehand, grab a snack or dinner from the Café, and let the Thursday afternoon's become your favorite day of the week!

■ ON A QUEST: Also on June 30th, the Cohasset Conservation Trust

(CCT) will team up with the South Shore Quest Committee, who has offered to do teach children how to make stamps and fairies. Quest was created on the CCT property, Great Brewster Woods, that starts right next to the common. It is a Fairies, Elves, and Troll Quest and children find 10 of these creatures in the woods. The Quest Committee put it in their Quest booklet that are available at the CCT table at the Farmers Market each week. There are also two other Quests right in Cohasset! This activity is free to help encourage children to learn about their community and the outdoors.

Transportation for local seniors

Cohasset Elder Affairs is delighted to announce that as of May 1 the administration of the FISH (Friends in Service to Humanity) transportation program will transition to their office. FISH volunteers provide rides to Cohasset seniors for out-of-town appointments using personal vehicles.

Trips will be beyond Cohasset and serve locations for which taking public transportation would be burdensome, or for which public transportation is not available. Rides occur Monday-Friday for appointments that are scheduled between 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Elder Affairs actively seeks additional drivers. Typically, a FISH driver commits to one or two scheduled days per month. If you are interested in volunteering, please contact the CEA transportation staff at 781-383-9112. Elder Affairs welcomes the opportunity to facilitate this valuable program and to maintaining the reliability and integrity of a service that has been a benefit to Cohasset residents for many years.

CHECKED OUT

The American Dream Gone Awry

"THE ACTION BUILDS as shady life insurance policies, fiery courtroom antics, money laundering and double indemnity plots abound. Meanwhile, Harris keeps even his peripheral characters multidimensional and the dialogue sprightly. A satisfying blend of intrigue and corporate mayhem by a playful foodie do-gooder."

- Kirkus Reviews

I loved "Checked Out". A worthy successor to Blood Feud: plenty of action, an interesting plot, peppered with that Harris humor.

- Steve Ackerman, Editor
The Reading Exchange

Alex Santone, the CEO of an 80 store grocery chain is gunned down in his tony East Side residence in Providence. His stunning wife Lucy, thirty years his junior, appears to be doing a minimum of grieving.

Where mounds of cash draw the attention of a criminal element to an industry and a place that you frequent at least once a week. Russell Riley replaces the murdered CEO and must fight off this element while trying to return the sagging Food Basket chain to profitability. Murder, Mayhem and Money Laundering are all on display and even Riley becomes "a person of interest."

"Dan Harris books move at a high velocity"

Checked Out is the sequel to the critically acclaimed and popular Blood Feud.

Checked Out spins a rousing whodunit set in the lucrative supermarket business in this second installment.

BLOOD FEUD

The Ultimate Food Fight

"...Harris amps up the messy courtroom antics in Blood Feud's fiery, scandalous, and surprising conclusion. With an economy of words, Harris's novel doesn't skimp on action, subtle romance, or satisfying suspense."

GIMME SHELTER

Willa is a wonderful girl

By Tammy Hatch

Meet Willa, an absolutely stunning one-year-old dilute tortie with a soft, short-haired fur coat that is a luxurious blend of light and dark shades of charcoal splattered with hints of beige. Vibrant green eyes and a half ivory/half charcoal smile complete her beautiful face.

Willa is a rescued stray found living on city streets. Stray cats face many dangers living outside, including being hit by a car, being harmed by another animal or person, freezing, starvation, and exposure to disease and parasites. Though Willa doesn't show any physical signs of harm from her ordeal, she does have a cautionary guard up right now.

Willa is a new arrival at the shelter and her preference at present is to hang back and observe her roommates and the goings on at the shelter rather than to engage in it. She is, however, very receptive to one-on-one attention and enjoys being petted and talked to.

Stray cats at one time had contact with people and either got lost, were abandoned or perhaps they ran away from their home. And just like people, a cat that was abandoned, neglected or abused is apprehensive and scared. Willa is still very young and what she needs is a home with owners who understand she is going to need time to build trust and feel safe again. Won't you consider giving this special little girl a second chance at life?

You can learn more about

Willa as well as the other cats and kittens we have available for adoption by visiting us online at www.hsar.org or by visiting us at our new location, 487 Nantasket Ave., Hull. Open hours are Monday nights, 6:30 to 7:30, and Saturdays, 2 to 3 p.m. If these times are not convenient for you, special appointments can be made by calling our adoption coordinator at 781-534-4902.

A Home
Equity Line
with a Difference

Unlike most, Coastal Heritage Bank offers a Home Equity Line that doesn't require you to choose between a revolving line of credit and a fixed-rate loan when you apply. It's called Coastal Plus Home Equity.

If you choose, you can borrow on your revolving line of credit and convert a portion (or all) of the borrowed amount into a fixed-rate installment loan. You can have up to five fixed-rate installment loans outstanding, at one time, without having to go through another application process. The amount available on your credit line will be reduced by the total balance(s) of your installment loan(s). As you pay down the balance of the installment loans, the amount available to borrow on your credit line will be replenished.

Apply today for your Coastal Plus Home Equity, and bring your plans to life!

abundance of wildlife that World's End provides. It's such an important teaching tool, whether you're going there with your family or leading a school group. It is so valuable on so many levels."

Hart is Trustees engagement site manager, Greater Hingham Portfolio. Formerly known as Trustees of Reservations but now simply Trustees, the organization embraces local properties World's End, Weir River Farm, Turkey Hill, Norris Reservation, Two-Mile Farm, and Whitney and Thayer Woods.

All of the venues are open year-round and are popular with Cohasset residents.

"The Trustees' mission is really about connecting people to places," said Fran Blanchard, Trustees general manager, South Shore. "Even though we care deeply about conservation, part of our goal is to make conservation land available to people and to provide them with inspiring opportunities and amazing experiences on our property. That is what we are trying to do."

Hart said she knows "how important it is to protect open space and how important it is for the public, for our flora and fauna," and added that "it's not uncommon" to welcome first-time woods walkers to a Trustees property.

"That's why places like that are so important," she said. "We take it for granted. When I was younger, we were outside from breakfast until you came in for dinner. It's a different world we live in now. Kids today have more screen time (TV, computers, cell phones), they have more homework, there are less woodlands available."

"Every time we have a kids group - even the chaperones or the parents who were with them - they're blown away. These wonderful properties give us these outdoor classrooms where you learn things you couldn't learn the same way inside a classroom."

Some 67,000 people visited World's End last year, taking in the sights of rolling hills, meadows and grasslands that provide nesting grounds for a variety of birds, miles of hiking trails that afford glimpses of deer and an occasional fox - with or without a squirrel in its mouth, and glorious drumlin-top views of nearby Hingham and Hull and of the Boston skyline 15 miles to the north.

Each visitor finds something different to enjoy and discover. As one recent park-goer from Billerica, north of Boston, put it, "If I lived closer, I'd be here every day."

And to think that World's End would have changed forever if plans in 1890 had been carried out. Then-owner John R. Brewer was farming the land, but he commissioned legendary landscape architect Frederick Law Olmsted - he of Boston's Emerald Necklace, New York City's Central Park, etc. - to design a 163-lot housing subdivision complemented by carriage roads, stone walls, and lots of trees.

Homes were never built and the peninsula remained pristine. The property was considered as a potential home to United Nations headquarters in 1945 and for a nuclear power plant to be built in the 1960s. All threats to altering its character ended when the Trustees acquired the land in 1967, and its popularity has done nothing but grow ever since.

This year marks the 125th anniversary of the Trustees' first property, the 20-acre Virginia Wood in Stoneham. On May 21, 1891, Bay State Gov. William E. Russell signed a law that established The Trustees of Public Reservations as the country's first private statewide conservation and preservation organization.

Parking

The uptick in popularity has created traffic and parking problems at World's End. But Blanchard is committed to making improvements and alleviating traffic and back-ups on Martin's Lane in Hingham, from which entry to the park is accessed.

"We've worked out a plan with a local landscape architect (Sean Papich, with Peter Marotta as project manager) and change the entrance to have it accommodate two-way traffic," Blanchard said.

"I've reached out to the community and talked to them about it. Right now we have 74 parking spaces and by just reconfiguring the existing lot and improving the flow of traffic, it's most of their existing footprint and we'll be able to get about 110 parking spaces."

"The park has gotten more popular and sometimes the traffic has been backed up on very busy weekend days. We've been working with the neighbors to try to solve this and we've changed our staffing levels and increased the number of rangers we have on duty. We're going to be doing a better job with our signage and we've set up a social media account (Twitter)."

Because the project has big impacts on the site and the community, Blanchard has hired such outside expertise as Papich to assist with vetting and determining the Trustees' best options. She will also be working with an engineer to develop plans for stormwater and drainage as the next step.

Blanchard has consulted with the directors of structural and cultural resources, and the director of ecology programs on this project along with regional staff.

"In addition, because this has an impact on the community, I have made an effort to be working with various town agencies to make sure they have an opportunity to represent the community as part of the planning process," said Blanchard, who has been in consultation with Hingham's police department, conservation agent, town planner and board of health.

"Once we have final plans, we'll be filing them with the town to start the official permitting process. We hope to start work on the physical changes on site this fall. There may be an opportunity to make some of the operational changes - including managing Twitter for traffic - this summer."

A significant part of answering the traffic questions has been the meetings between Blanchard and residents local to World's End.

"I think we're doing a thorough job hearing from our neighbors and working with the community," Blanchard said. "People will always have concerns, and that's part of the process, a part of the process I really love. That's why I work on public properties. I have had some very good conversations. People have shared some very good ideas and I've incorporated some of those ideas where they can be."

New features designed to ease traffic and reduce backups, etc., are in place. Those who arrive at the entrance on a bicycle will gain free admission, and if you took the MBTA, bring your commuter rail pass to World's End and you'll get in free. If you're walking from the Nantasket Junction train station, you'll be 20 minutes and a little more than a mile away from the gate at World's End. Those who take the commuter boat to the Shipyard at Hingham also are granted free admission.

"The idea is that we hope people are more comfortable checking the Twitter account in advance to see if the parking is full before you come all the way down," Blanchard said, noting that the Twitter address is worldsend02043.

"On our bigger events, we're going to do registration online, which we did for Summer Solstice (June 18)," Blanchard said. "That way we can limit the number of people who are coming because we think that World's End does have a carrying capacity. We don't want to over-use the park. One of our worries is that we'll cause damage to the landscape."

"If we do it online, there's no transaction when you arrive, so that'll help keep traffic from backing up in the neighborhood. For smaller events, you just come and sign up when you get there."

While World's End is open year-round, it is busiest in the spring and fall. People tend to go to the beach in summer and not go for a hike in the reservation.

To celebrate 125 years under Trustees auspices, many special programs have been scheduled throughout 2016. For information, visit thetrustees.org/125.

For information on Wild Walks at World's End, which will be conducted every other Monday starting July 11, 10 a.m. to noon, visit thetrustees.org.

"The idea of Wild Walks is for kids to dress up, for example, as dinosaurs and owls and explore the coastline," Blanchard said. "It'll be a fun way to get the families out and have the kids dress up."

LIBRARY FUN

Siblings MacKenna, 5, and Bryce Robinson, 2, put in their song requests with Mamasteph.

Mamasteph always draws a crowd

By Hannah Sparks and Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

With the first strum of Mamasteph's guitar, the crowd of children, parents and caregivers promptly quieted down.

The odd shout or cry would pop up from time to time, but children were transfixed as the South Shore singer and storyteller launched into her repertoire of both original children's songs and classics. She sometimes asked them to sing with her during a recent performance.

"That is one of the best things in the world," Mamasteph said, as the children sang "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star."

The quiet fascination lasted until she pulled out a monkey puppet named "Monks." He squeaked out interpretations of songs he wanted Mamasteph to sing, drawing giggles and shrieks of laughter from the audience. Later, during "If You're Happy and You Know It," Mamasteph led the children in clapping, stamping their feet and shouting out "hooray!"

Mamasteph has been a staple at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library for over five years, and children's librarian Sharon Moody has loved every minute of it.

"The energy changes when she comes in the building," said Moody. "Everyone breathes a sigh of relief, and you know you're gonna have a great day. Babies start bouncing as soon as they see her guitar."

Mamasteph soon outgrew the meeting room at Paul Pratt, but without a larger space to use, the library continued packing people in for the once-weekly performances. People spilled into the hallway; overflow space was provided in the community room.

Now that Our World has been turned over to the Recreation Department, the neighbors have worked it out for the library to use the large upstairs space for Mamasteph performances, which regularly draw about 150 people.

But not every library has access to a big room with a stage. Some, like Scituate, have had to restrict attendance by requiring guests to pick up tickets ahead of time. The tickets are free, but without one, you'll never get in. Scituate Town Library Director Jessi Finnie makes 100 tickets available on Mondays, and they're typically gone by Wednesday for a Friday performance.

"For our volume, it's really impressive and it really says a lot about her," Finnie said. "Everyone who comes in is really actively participating." She credited the Friends of Scituate Library for sponsoring a program that's so well loved by so many.

Finnie remembers a time when librarians doubled as traffic controllers in the Branch Street parking lot on the mornings Mamasteph was due to perform. That's what inspired the ticket system in the first place.

and other libraries' maxed-out programs. Parking is a nightmare here, too, said Moody, with people cramming their cars onto the grass and along the shoulder of Sohler Street.

"I try not to look at it," said Moody. But even she falls under Mamasteph's spell, parking headaches soon forgotten. "She has an aura," said the children's librarian. "As soon as you're in her field, you feel like, 'Mamasteph's here; everything's good.'"

Scituate resident Maighdlin Scroggins said Mamasteph's visits make for a fun, family outing and bonding opportunity. For the past few years, her father, Stephen Conway, has been taking her 3-year-old son Finn to see the songstress at Scituate library (which is hosting Mamasteph at St. Luke's Episcopal Church during construction), she said.

"He loves the truck and train song so much that he makes me sing them every night. He knows all the words and my whole family (aunties, uncles and grandparents) have learned the words as well," she said. "Mamasteph exudes warmth and grace. Mamasteph is a household name in the South Shore."

Scroggins can already tell her other son, Conor, also loves Mamasteph, but joked that, at nine months, he's too young to talk about it yet.

Mamasteph, also known as Stephanie Chase of Scituate, has been performing for children for about 12 years. It all started when a friend asked if she would sing at the Beach Street School, a preschool in Scituate. Chase wasn't sure what she would do at first, but she brought her guitar, and it went from there.

"I went to the class, and I guess the child in me opened up," she said.

Learning activities, such as counting and dancing, are built into what Chase does.

"It's enriching their brains very deeply. It's not just 'Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star.' It's important," she said.

Children aren't the only ones who enjoy Mamasteph's shows: Parents and caretakers understand the appeal.

Molly Putnam of Marshfield Hills sees Mamasteph twice a week as a nanny. She sees her on Mondays in Hingham when she's watching a Cohasset family and Fridays at St. Luke's when she's caring for a Scituate family.

Despite seeing her shows regularly, the performances never get old, Putnam said. Sometimes, she said, she will stay after to talk with Mamasteph.

"I'm sort of a groupie now," she said with a laugh.

Catherine Boyle of Scituate said it's great to see the children singing along with Mamasteph, whose work she said introduces them to socialization, music and culture.

"She's a very family oriented, kid friendly, charismatic personality," Boyle said.

Boyle has seen Mamasteph in Scituate, Cohasset and Marshfield. Her daughter, Kennedy, at about five months old, has seen Mamasteph multiple times already, she said.

During a busy week, Chase said she gives 11 or 12 performances. She said she's honored to do what she does, and that seeing the children's faces light up is a reward she never gets tired of.

"Some little one will come up and give me a hug. I don't take that for granted at all," Chase said.

But what's really remarkable, according to Moody, is not only that Mamasteph hugs back. "She remembers every one of the kids' names," said Moody. "It's amazing."

OUR VIEW

Early birds get most out of CPA

It was 15 years ago that the first Massachusetts towns — North Andover and Bedford — voted to adopt the Community Preservation Act. Signed into law in September 2000, the CPA helps towns preserve historic sites and open space, create affordable housing and develop outdoor recreation facilities by imposing a surcharge of up to 3 percent on residents' real estate tax bills.

In addition to the monies raised locally, CPA communities gain annual distributions from a statewide trust, funded through a surcharge on all real estate transactions at the registry of deeds.

That state match, in the first six years after the law was enacted, was 100 percent of what the CPA towns raised locally. It's been a tremendous boon for towns that acted quickly on the Act.

Cities and towns first out of the gate to adopt the CPA were smart to do so and have reaped great benefits by bringing in the largest possible state match and completing the most projects in the areas of historic preservation, open space protection, affordable housing and recreation.

On the South Shore, Cohasset, Easton, Hingham and Marshfield were first to adopt the CPA in the spring of 2001. Easton and Marshfield imposed the maximum surcharge of 3 percent, while Cohasset and Hingham set the surcharge at 1.5 percent. The CPA funds generated locally, combined with the state trust fund distribution, have been significant to say the least.

In Marshfield, more than $20 million has funded projects like the revitalization of Peter Igo Park and restoration work at the Winslow House and Hatch Mill.

The Quiset House renovation and the preservation of the Gov.

Ames Estate are just two Easton projects made possible through the nearly $18 million raised through the CPA.

Cohasset has used some of its more than $7.3 million in CPA funds for the Beechwood Ballpark, the creation of affordable apartments in Pratt Building and the preservation of the John Wilson House and Maritime Museum.

In Hingham, where voters soundly rejected an effort to repeal the CPA in 2006, nearly $15 million has been raised supporting the recent acquisition of the 56-acre scenic Lehner property and the Hingham Heritage Museum and Visitor Center currently under construction in Hingham Square.

Countless similar projects have been designed and completed over the last decade in CPA communities throughout the South Shore. These are projects that following the great recession of 2008, when towns were struggling to make budget ends meet, would surely have been shelved without that funding source.

Towns coming late to the table — like Abington, which adopted the CPA in April and Rockland which will vote on it Nov. 8, have missed out on opportunities to preserve open space and historic sites including Griffin's Dairy Farm. Those towns will also see a smaller slice of the state trust fund pie, as many more Massachusetts communities — 161 in total — have now adopted the CPA. But moving forward they will have a chance to take on and pay for projects that will improve life in their communities.

And while state trust fund distributions have dwindled to about 30 percent in recent years, also due in part to the sluggish economy, that's still a very good return on a community's investment in its future.

UPDATE

Cohasset harbor establishments to reopen

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

The businesses on the harbor, including Atlantica, Olde Salt House, and Brisa, will as soon as June 24th, according to a Facebook post by manager Anil Popat.

"I would like to inform everyone that only the restaurants are closed by the current and old ownership," wrote Popat. "Events are being hosted. There is a shortage in the kitchen at the moment and under the new management and ownership, we should have full staffing by 24th June, the date we intend to open with no potential obstacles in the way."

Popat wrote in response to a litany of fears and concerns on the community page "Cohasset 143."

More than 40 people had responded to a June 14th post that said, "Is Atlantica and the Salt House really closed? That would be awful..."

Comments ranged from laments — "It doesn't feel like summer without it" — to outrage — "We need more waterfront dining, not less!" — to demands: "Why don't our officials do something?" and "Why did the buyer even want it" if he was just planning to close it?

The commenters and original poster were confused by a notice posted on the businesses' doors and websites.

The notice said, "Atlantica, The Olde Salt House, Brisa, and the Cohasset Harbor Inn have been sold to the folks at the Red Lion Inn. We expect the closing to take place on or around June 24, 2016. Until the closing, we will only be handling our booked Events and will not be open to the public."

Many interpreted this to mean that the restaurants would be permanently closed to the public following their sale to Red Lion Inn owner Gerde Ordheide. Some expressed dismay but little surprise over what they believed to be the fate of the harbor business district.

However, the notice, posted by the departing management team, was referring to the closing of the purchase, not the termination of the businesses.

Many balked when they saw that the establishments would remain open for booked events, thinking that new management wanted to go forward as an events-only business.

But the notice was only trying to indicate that events booked in advance would be honored even while general operations were paused during the business transfer.

Popat, who could not be reached for comment by the Mariner, reiterated further down the conversation, "I can assure you that the all of the businesses will be open for retail and function business around the 24th June."

In response to further comments, he added, "Sunday brunch will be continued in the same way. These businesses definitely are gems and treasures... I'm looking forward to hosting everyone."

BEACON HILL

Bradley: New public records law increases transparency

Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, joined his colleagues in the Legislature to pass a bill on Wednesday, May 25, updating public records laws and enhancing accountability measures. The legislation, which received unanimous votes in both the House and Senate and was signed by Governor Baker on Friday, June 3, creates a standardized timeframe and process in which requested documents must be produced and ensures that judicial remedies can be sought.

"This bill will increase transparency and the use of technology without adding what amounts to an unfunded mandate on to our cities and towns," said Rep. Bradley. "I am grateful to all my colleagues in the Legislature for working together to provide a necessary update to the state's public records laws."

This consensus legislation represents the first update to state's public records law in more than 40 years. Under the bill, Massachusetts will have standardized processes through which the public can access records and guidelines for the fees associated with obtaining documents. Additionally, the legislation requires agencies — and municipalities to a feasible extent — to provide commonly requested public records online.

To create a predictable and rigorous timeline for responses, the bill mandates that records access officers comply with a request within 10 business days of receipt. If the officer is unable to do so, he or she must contact the requester to identify pertinent documents, provide specific reasons for withholding, or give a reasonable timeframe in which the agency will produce the records. Agencies must comply within 15 days, and municipalities must comply within 25 days. Upon a showing of good cause, a single extension of not more than 20 business days for an agency or 30 days for a municipality may be granted.

To ensure that taxpayers can reasonably access records, agencies may not charge for the first four hours of employee time to search for, compile, segregate, redact or reproduce records. Municipalities may not charge for the first two hours of employee time unless they have a population of 20,000 or less. If a records officer fails to respond to a request within 10 business days, no fee may be charged.

The judicial provisions, processes and remedies contained in this bill significantly heighten enforceability and accountability measures. Previously, courts were unable to award attorney fees, address improperly incurred costs or award civil damages. This legislation also permits punitive damages, which will be no less than $1,000 and no more than $5,000, to be awarded if the court finds an agency or municipality did not act in good faith.

NEWS UPDATE

No home for James Island proposal

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

In a near reenactment of a vote they took last September, Conservation Commissioners voted once again to deny an application to build a large single-family home on James Island.

John Steinmetz, the applicant, was dismayed at the 3-2 vote against his project on Wednesday, June 22nd.

"I came back in good faith, trusting the commission to do the right thing," said Steinmetz. "I dropped the lawsuits against them, I moved the driveway and did everything the commission asked, and I still got screwed."

Abutters and lovers of the environment left on a high note. Many spoke up during public comment to underscore that they aren't worried about their views; they're worried about the natural resources, beauty, and character of Cohasset.

"It's about upholding bylaws and protecting interest areas," said George Parks of Jerusalem Road. "Putting the house on the one-acre buildable lot would be far more impactful on our view than putting it where they're proposing to put it. It's not a view issue."

Steve Crummey of Atlantic Avenue spoke of precedents. "The conservation bylaws are very crisp," he said. "The coastal buffer zone is 50 feet—period. Stick with the bylaws or else you're gonna have 50 people through here asking for the same thing."

Commissioners Patrice Vogelmann and Edward Graham voted in favor, with Justin Pimpare, Jack Creighton, and Alex Koines in opposition. As before, the commission cited environmental reasons for the decision.

Last time, concerns centered on potential impacts to the wetlands; this time, board members feared for the coastal bank. In order to move the driveway out of the 50-foot wetlands buffer zone, Steinmetz would have had to put it right down the middle of the isthmus, straight through a huge ledge outcropping.

Steinmetz argued that altering the coastal bank would not be an issue, since the purpose of the bank is to protect uplands from storms and flooding and to provide a sediment source. This particular ledge outcropping serves neither purpose and does not provide significant habitat to wildlife. So, said Steinmetz, it shouldn't be subject to the same limitations as a traditional coastal bank.

That, however, wasn't the opposition's only concern. Michael Rosen argued on behalf of the James Island Protection Group that the commission still didn't have enough information to make a decision.

"You asked for a construction plan," said Rosen.

"What you got was 25 pages of boilerplate material that looks like it's from some other project. We still don't know how much earth removal is necessary."

Rosen added that Steinmetz had not even met his burden of proof to show that his circumstances were "extenuating" or "rare and unusual," as is required for a variance.

"Every other home on Little Harbor is in the exact same conditions," said Rosen. "It's not rare. It's not unusual."

Rosen offered an alternative blueprint in which the house would be located outside of the coastal resource areas, closer to existing homes off Atlantic Avenue. This proposal was shared to demonstrate that a home of the desired size and style could be constructed on the property without disturbing protected interests or dealing with setback, zoning, or variances.

The plan took into account the size of the Steinmetz

"I dropped the lawsuits against them, I moved the driveway and did everything the commission asked, and I still got screwed."

John Steinmetz

family; in fact, the proposed house was even bigger than the one Steinmetz has been fighting for — "And their children will have the best backyard in the world," said Rosen.

But Steinmetz wouldn't hear it. He said he's determined to build his dream house in his dream spot, no matter what it takes or how long it takes.

Protecting property owners from fraud

Trust, but verify" is a famous quote from the 40th President of the United States Ronald Reagan summarizing his dealings with the former Soviet Union.

"Trust, but verify" could also be used to describe the recording of land documents, whether it is a deed, homestead, mortgage discharge or other document, on your behalf. But how would you be able to verify whether a recording of a land document against your name is legitimate and not the result of fraudulent activity. The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds has the answer.

For the past year and a half, the Registry has offered a free on-line Consumer Notification Service to protect Norfolk County property owners against fraud.

You may ask why is this type of service necessary? The F.B.I has reported that property and mortgage fraud is one of the fastest growing white collar crimes in the United States. While we are fortunate this problem has not revealed itself here in Norfolk County, other jurisdictions across the country have reported individuals recording fraudulent documents and making it appear like they own another person's home or property. The purpose of my telling you this is not to cause anxiety but to be proactive and provide consumers a program the protects homeowners and provides peace of mind.

How does one sign up for this program? Any owner of real property in the 28 communities comprising Norfolk County can sign-up for the Consumer Notification Service free of charge by doing the following. # The lost art of letter writing

By Diane Snyder

I'm missing the art of letter writing, the practice of putting pen to paper, any paper, from fine stationery to white lined paper pulled out of a notebook. I want to open up my mailbox and find more than ads and solicitations. I want to burst into song with the refrain, "Please Mr. Postman, look and see, is there a letter in your bag for me?" which, at the very least, would bring a smile to my mailman's face.

I want more than quick phrases sent over cyberspace, text messages designed for minimal communication. In print or in cursive, in pen or in pencil, I yearn to devour a letter's contents, savor its messages and thoughts, appreciate the time it took to use this form of sharing, and return the favor with a letter of my own. It's what I used to do, what everybody used to do, and I have the letters to prove it! I'll begin with a stack of letters, written in the summer of 1968, addressed to my parents, and stamped "par avion," "per via aerea," "flugpost," and "air mail," depending on the country from which they were posted. My mom was a saver, which explains why I still have these letters almost 50 years later. On page after page I attempt a travelogue that will give my parents a sense of my amazing summer in Europe. I take them from England to France to Italy to Germany to Austria to Switzerland, to Sweden. I record the sights, history, foods, and adventures (slightly censored).

All the letters end with approximately the same paragraph: "Hope you are well. I think you know what a wonderful time I'm having, and how I appreciate it. I can also say I'm eager for my own bed, clean clothes, home cooked food, bathroom, etc. Oh yes, and I miss you, too!" So many forgotten memories return to me now as I read, but it's more than that. Who was that girl with the spirit of adventure and desire for exciting new experiences? Well, some of it remains true. She still likes to return to the comforts of home, and yes, she still misses her parents after all these years later.

Another stack, again saved by Mom, covers the years 1970-1974. They start out with me describing my new life as a young bride, wife of Sam, living in a garden apartment on a creek in Annapolis, Maryland. I share the details of daily living, reporting on my guitar lessons, sewing classes, efforts to improve my cooking skills, challenges of teaching kindergarten, trips to the doctor to deal with my frequent sore throats, and all the other things I'd be telling them on a phone conversation.

Sunday is saved for the actual speaking, the day the rates go down to a more affordable level. These letters also contain the details of my first pregnancy, the arrival of our baby boy, and the joys and demands of parenthood. They conclude with the plans to move back to the Boston area. I read them through the lens of nostalgia, missing a stage of life that seemed so exhausting then, and so perfect now. The last pile, saved by me, and labeled "Letters from Camp", records the overnight camp experiences of my three children. Here's a sample from my daughter: "Hi Mom and Dad, I am not really having fun. I want to go home, but I hope you are having fun." My second born manages to write in such large lettering that he fills a page with two sentences: "Dear Mom and Dad, I'm having an okay time. Can you send me a container with gum, candy, drink mix, and batteries?" On the other hand, son number one prefers to write in great detail. Here are a few excerpts: "I find writing letters to you fun, so I'm going to write one a day." "I desperately need these things sent to me in the mail—6-12 box drinks, a box of cookies or crackers, 1-2 cans Pringles, Kool-aid drink mix, paper cups (kitchen size, not bathroom), 1 big package M and M's, a small fan." And my favorite line: "Oh, could you send up my Swatch watch? It's in my desk. All the kids here are rich and some have 1 for each day of the week." (Interesting that this son's first job out of college was designing watches for Swatch.) I still smile when I read these, a reminder of another stage of life that now seems to have passed so quickly. I'm feeling a bit like an archivist, keeper of the letters that record my personal history in a way that no tweet or text or email could accomplish. In spite of rumors that handwriting is a thing of the past, and some day schools will go paperless, I'm not giving up. I open the top drawer of my desk, revealing a roll of 100 stamps, sharpened pencils, ball-point pens, and stationery in an array of sizes and designs. After all, I have 2 grandchildren in California and 1 in New York, and I'm guessing that they would each love to receive a letter from Grandma. Even better, maybe I'll find letters from them in my mailbox one day soon.

Encore for long-range planning group

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

It's been a long-range conversation, but with the onset of a new fiscal year, the time has finally come to resurrect the long-range planning group, selectmen said this week.

Officials pointed out most towns have a roundtable group like this, though the name and composition vary based on each community's needs. In Cohasset, this group existed before under the name "budget planning group."

Born out of the national economic crisis and in response to local financial issues, the budget planning group reviewed, recommended, and commented on local fiscal policy and other finance-related matters impacting Cohasset, officials said.

Launched in 2009, the group survived about half a decade before it was abandoned. Yet members of other committees have commented on its absence, particularly during the development of warrant articles for Annual Town Meeting. So, last fall, selectmen started talking about bringing it back.

Town Manager Chris Senior, who will serve as moderator (and, if necessary, tie-breaker), said he had spoken with committees and groups around town and found a general consensus in favor of "getting the band back together."

A full calendar of fiscal forecasting forums throughout the past fiscal year provided a strong prelude to the creation (or rather, re-creation) of this key committee, which provides guidance and insight to elected officials regarding long-term financial considerations and more.

Originally, selectmen thought to call the resurrected budget planning group a "fiscal working group" or "fiscal planning group," but they feared that including the word "fiscal" in the name would make the focus too narrow.

The purpose is, broadly, to establish lasting stability and to make plans and projections around long-term strategic issues, of which financial factors are only a single slice.

The new long-range planning group will comprise two members each from the Board of Selectmen, School Committee, Capital Budget Committee, and Advisory Committee. The Town Manager, Finance Director, School Superintendent, and School Business Manager will also participate.

On top of that, the group may decide to appoint two additional members for single-year terms to help with priority issues. For instance, a Board of Health member could be appointed to help address long-term public health concerns. Citizens-at-large may also be appointed this way if necessary.

This mirrors the structure of the former budget planning group. When it was around, that group moved the town to adopt a new budget process and financial policies related to revenue and expenditure forecasting. It established a system for debt and reserves and met regularly – about once a month – to maintain all this.

At their June 21st meeting, selectmen talked details. Who reports on the group's activity, how often, and to whom? How long are terms, and how should they be staggered to provide the best blend of continuity and fresh blood? Should there be a "sunset" on this group, or should it just exist for as long as the Town feels it needs it?

The board will finalize these details at its June 29th meeting so that committees will have a little time to think about which members to appoint when the group launches on July 5th.

They'll have to get right to work, since selectmen develop next year's budget in September and will be looking for input from this group.

SUCCESS

requires towns that adopt the statute to set aside funds for the purposes of historical preservation, open space and recreation initiatives, and the creation of affordable housing. A percentage of local funds are matched by the state trust fund, raised through fees at the Registry of Deeds.

Local funds are collected through a 1.5 percent property tax surcharge (after the first $100,000 of evaluation). Local revenue totals over $400,000 per year, with a state match of around 30 percent. Over the past 15 years the town has contributed $4,641,757 to the preservation fund; the state match has been $2,715,330 for a total of $7,357,087.

The Community Preservation Committee reviews community-nominated projects to determine the best use of funds and brings its recommendations to Annual Town Meeting. The community is free to pitch ideas anytime during the year; the committee is always happy to convene and discuss, according to CPC Chairman Russ Bonetti.

"Our goal is to use the money we're getting from taxpayers in a way that's going to benefit as many of them as we can," explained Bonetti.

As chairman, Bonetti knows better than anyone how the CPA has paid off in Cohasset.

"We've really done something for everybody," said Bonetti. "Sometimes you hear people say we haven't done much for the town, but that just isn't true – we've done a ton for the town. It's stuff that, long after we're gone, it's still gonna be going. And stuff like that is the reason I'm doing this."

In terms of recreation initiatives, the aforementioned playgrounds and ballparks are just the tip of the iceberg. The committee was also responsible for upgrading Turkey Hill walking trails last year, as well as clearing some trees to increase habitat for nesting ground birds at the top of the hill.

This year, the committee is partnering with the Recreation Commission to replace the Milliken Field snack shack. The new building will have proper restroom facilities – no more Porta-potties on soccer Saturdays. A similar sharing of costs funded the Sailing Club that was completed in summer of 2015.

CPA funds have also purchased more than 50 acres of land over Bonetti's six-year tenure as chairman. Many of these purchases served to connect other recreational areas, widening parks to increase public recreation opportunities. And many have protected scenic vistas or wildlife habitats that may have otherwise been developed into residential neighborhoods.

In terms of historic preservation, the committee was responsible for restoring the windows at First Parish, the cupola at the library, and the interior of the Pratt Building. It has helped preserve records in partnership with the Town Clerk's office. It has funded studies regarding the best course of action for restoring Town Hall to its former stature and hopes to take action on that project in the next few years.

Finally, in terms of affordable housing, the committee has... well, actually, not done very much, Bonetti says. Compared to well over $4 million apiece for recreation and historical projects, the $745,000 put toward housing looks like pittance, he notes.

For Bonetti, housing is the most important of the committee's three callings, but the town has not proved fertile soil for such endeavors.

CPA funds have supported improvements to existing affordable units for seniors at the Elm Street complex. Last year, the committee provided necessary storm doors and hot water heaters to residents.

But only two affordable housing units have been created since Cohasset adopted the program in 2001 in the Pratt Building (Historical Society headquarters), and in Bonetti's opinion, that's just not enough.

"We've got plenty of baseball fields and plenty of soccer fields," said the chairman. "We've got all sorts of fields. And we've got lots of historical stuff that we've done, and that'll always come up. But housing... We've got nothing to show for it, and I find that embarrassing. We've been at it far too long to have accomplished so little."

Bonetti hinted that the committee's poor track record on affordable housing may be changing soon but said it was too early to discuss potential projects in detail.

Going forward, Bonetti said he doesn't picture the Community Preservation Committee running out of steam anytime soon. He does want to be cautious of letting CPA funds become a slush fund, and he doesn't want to get in the habit of spending money on projects just because money is there.

But with a strong committee in place and a Town Manager who understands why the funds are there, Bonetti doesn't think that'll be an issue.

MODERNIZING LOCAL GOVERNMENTS (H 4397)

House 153-0, approved and sent to the Senate a 109-page bill aimed at modernizing municipal finance and government. Provisions include increasing from 3 percent to 5 percent the percentage of the tax levy for the preceding fiscal year from that can be used for a reserve fund for extraordinary or unforeseen expenses; allowing a municipality to combine its treasurer and tax collector into one appointed position without first obtaining a special act; and permitting municipalities to immediately deny local licenses and permits to any taxpayer who has neglected or refused to pay local taxes. Current law permits this collection method, but only if the taxpayer has been delinquent for at least one year.

Many provisions in the bill are technical and the measure has been called "the most boring weed-whacking stuff you ever saw in your life," by Gov. Charlie Baker.

Supporters said the bill removes obsolete state laws and updates other laws to help government be more efficient at the local level by enhancing the delivery of services and promoting regional cooperation among neighboring communities. They noted the measure is supported by the Massachusetts Municipal Association, an entity that lobbies for the state's cities and towns.

ANALYZE INVENTORY TAX (H 4397)

House 38-115, rejected an amendment creating an 11-member special commission to investigate and analyze the benefits and costs of eliminating the inventory tax paid by businesses based on the value of its inventory at the end of each year.

Amendment supporters said studies show that this tax has cost the Bay State more than 56,000 jobs because if companies move their inventory out of state, they also move the jobs that work on the inventory. They argued the tax is a disincentive for business owners and leads to the tax being passed onto the consumer, a reduction in the number of new employee hires, layoffs during the slow season and/or the company moving its inventory to one of the many states without an inventory tax including Connecticut, New Hampshire or Rhode Island.

Amendment opponents said the amendment is unrelated to the bill and should be considered at a more appropriate time in the future.

PROPERTY TAX EXEMPTION FOR SENIORS (S 1494)

Senate 35-0, approved and sent to the House a bill that would raise from $55,000 to $80,000 the maximum annual income a senior over 65 can earn and still be eligible for a property tax deferral. The local community decides whether to allow a tax deferral in the first place. Communities can charge up to 8 percent interest on the amount deferred. The amount of the deferral plus interest must be paid when the senior moves or dies.

Amendment supporters said this will reduce expenses for seniors and allow more of them to remain in their homes.

INCREASE VOLUNTEER HOURS FOR EXEMPTION (S 1494)

Senate 35-0, approved an amendment that would raise from $1,000 to $1,500 the amount of property tax credit seniors can earn by doing volunteer work for their city or town. It also hikes from 125 to 175 the number of hours a senior can work to earn that $1,500.

Amendment supporters said the increase will give some seniors an additional $500 reduction in their property taxes. They noted this is another change that will allow more seniors to remain in their homes.

SUPPORT FOR VETERANS (H 4278)

Senate 37-0, approved a bill that would help veterans by improving benefits in several areas including employment, housing, property tax relief and education.

Provisions include excluding a disabled veteran's federal disability compensation from counting toward the income level used to calculate his or her rent for public housing; giving eligible veterans a preference in public housing in all communities, not just the one in which the veteran resides; providing property tax exemptions for veterans rated 100 percent disabled from service-connected blindness; adding veterans status as a protected class under the current law prohibiting discrimination in employment; allowing cities and towns to appoint a veterans agent for three-year terms instead of the current one year; and making all children of prisoners of war eligible for the Public Service Scholarship. Currently, the scholarship is limited to children of the Vietnam War POWs. This legislation would extend eligibility to all children of POWs.

Supporters said the state should provide these additional benefits and opportunities to the thousands of Bay State veterans who have served our nation. They noted that one in three homeless people in the nation are veterans. They pointed out that one in five Massachusetts veterans suffer post-traumatic stress disorder and 11 percent suffer traumatic brain injuries.

The House has approved a different version of the bill and the Senate version now goes to the House for consideration.

PUBLIC EMPLOYEES KILLED IN THE LINE OF DUTY (H 4278)

Senate 37-0, approved an amendment that would make the surviving children of all public employees killed in the line of duty eligible for higher education scholarships. Current law makes the children of veterans, police officers, firefighters and correction officers eligible for the scholarships.

Amendment supporters said eligibility should be extended to all public employees who make the ultimate sacrifice.

CPA

"Right now, we're seeing such a tremendous interest in the Community Preservation Act," said Stuart Saginor, executive director of the statewide Community Preservation Coalition. "The overall benefits in terms of improved quality of life, that's the important thing. Most CPA projects wouldn't happen without this funding source because of the pressures that exist in cash-strapped budgets."

Faced with municipal budget constraints that often leave little funding for non-essential services, nearly half the cities and towns in Massachusetts have adopted the Community Preservation Act, a 16-year-old state law that gives them access to matching funds for open space preservation, historic preservation, affordable housing and outdoor recreation projects.

In cities and towns that adopt the Community Preservation Act, residents pay a surcharge of up to 3 percent on their property taxes. The communities are then able to draw matching funds from the state's Community Preservation Trust Fund, which is funded from deed recording fees charged by registries of deeds across the Commonwealth.

A diluted match

As more and more cities and towns have adopted the Community Preservation Act over the years, each community's share of the matching funds has dwindled. From 2002-07, the state matched local CPA funds 100 percent. But following the collapse of the housing market, cities and towns got matches equal to less than 68 percent of their locally raised funds in 2008.

Since then, as an increasing number of communities have adopted the CPA, the matching rate has continued to trend downward. It's been higher than 35 percent just once in the past seven years.

"Every community basically shares that trust fund, so as more communities sign on, everyone's piece of the pie gets smaller," Saginor said. "It's something all CPA communities are concerned about."

The mechanism to provide matching funds could get radically altered this fall, when Boston voters decide whether to adopt the Community Preservation Act. Far larger than any other city in Massachusetts, Boston's property tax levy last year was more than $1.8 billion. If the city were to adopt a 1 percent tax surcharge for the CPA, it would generate more than $18.6 million locally, plus matching funds from the state.

"If Boston hops in, they'd take 25 percent of the matching funds," said CPA critic Lawrence DiCara, a former Boston City Council president and current partner at Nixon Peabody.

Cambridge, he said, already takes in about 15 percent of the CPA matching funds each year.

"If more people get the CPA, that means you have to request a general appropriation to make up the difference," DiCara said.

Gov. Charlie Baker, the House and the Senate each included a $10 million allocation to supplement the CPA fund in their fiscal 2017 budget proposals. To address the waning matching levels, Sen. Cynthia Creem, D-Newton, and Rep. Stephen Kulik, D-Worthington, proposed a bill earlier this legislative session that would boost the CPA trust fund by raising Registry of Deeds fees from $20 to as much as $50.

Bob Durand, a former secretary of environmental affairs who wrote the first version of the CPA legislation during his time as a state representative in 1984, admits the constraints on the matching program pose a challenge.

"One danger is the match going down," said Durand, who represented and still resides in Marlborough. "I applaud Boston for looking at the CPA, but sometimes you've got to be careful what you look for. It's going to put a huge burden on the fund, but it may also provide us the opportunity to lobby the legislature for more funding."

Haves and have-nots?

DiCara said his biggest criticism of the CPA is that "it's obvious it's leading to further disparity of income in the Commonwealth."

Typically, he said, it's been property owners in wealthy communities who have been able to afford to impose tax surcharges on themselves. Residents of all communities pay into the CPA matching fund program through real estate deed fees, but only communities that have adopted the CPA reap the benefits, he said.

"This is effectively creating dual channels where poorer people are living in low-service, low-tax communities, while more affluent people are living in higher-service, higher tax communities," DiCara said. "When you don't have a lot, you worry about paying rent and putting food on the table. You don't worry about adding a 1 percent tax so you can buy someone's farm."

Saginor, though, said legislative changes enacted in 2012 have made the CPA much more desirable for less affluent urban communities.

The changes included a provision that allows cities to exempt the first $100,000 of commercial property value from the CPA surcharge. The modifications also allowed communities to use CPA funds to rehabilitate existing parks, playgrounds and athletic fields. Before the changes, recreation projects could only be funded with CPA dollars if they involved the purchase of new land.

"That legislation did exactly what was intended," Saginor said. "Gateway cities are where all the interest has been in the CPA. We've had Fall River, New Bedford, Somerville, Salem, Medford, Malden and Beverly all adopt the CPA since 2012."

An evolving tool

When Durand first proposed the Community Preservation Act in the House back in 1984, he introduced it as a land bank bill.

"We added housing in 1988, and it almost passed," he recalled. "Then I chaired a special commission on historic preservation in the '90s, when I was in the Senate. It started as a way for suburban communities to fight suburban sprawl, provide housing for folks who could no longer afford to live in those communities and preserve historic resources."

It was finally signed into law by Gov. Paul Cellucci in 2000, when Durand was secretary of environmental affairs.

Durand, a representative of the Community Preservation Coalition and president of Durand & Anastas Environmental Strategies, said the CPA has exceeded his expectations.

To date, 161 cities and towns have adopted the CPA. The law is responsible for raising $1.6 billion for preservation projects since 2000 and has supported or created more than 9,400 units of affordable housing.

More than 23,470 acres of open space have been preserved with CPA funds, and more than 4,000 applications have been made for historic preservation projects.

"It's been a real boon when cities and towns, because of Proposition 2 ½, haven't been able to raise money to preserve their quality of life or provide housing," Durand said. "A lot of times, cities' and towns' focus has been — as it should be — on schools and public safety, and those other issues have had to take a back seat."

Under CPA regulations, at least 10 percent of a community's preservation funds must be devoted to each of the following areas: open space, affordable housing and historic preservation.

Aaron Gornstein, president and CEO of Preservation of Affordable Housing Inc. and a former state undersecretary of housing and economic development, said CPA funds have been used for the construction of affordable housing, renovation of existing affordable housing and down payment assistance programs for first-time homebuyers.

Typically, he said, a community will partner with a developer or nonprofit program for affordable housing projects. CPA funds are often combined with money from other state and federal sources.

"It's flexible funding to meet local housing needs," he said. "It helps communities tailor housing solutions to fit their needs."

In open space preservation projects, it's also typical for a city or town to work with multiple partners. Projects such as protecting public water supplies, preserving wildlife habitat or maintaining an active working forest or farm, fall under the umbrella of open space, said Gary Clayton, president of Mass Audubon.

"Over that time, it's proven to be an important additional tool in helping communities acquire land for a variety of important purposes," Clayton said.

Jim Igoe, president of Preservation Massachusetts, described the scope of historic preservation projects the CPA has supported.

"We've seen a lot of restoration of historic buildings such as town halls and libraries," he said. "We saw the restoration of the Gay Head Lighthouse. We've seen cemetery restorations, handicap accessibility to historic buildings, artifacts surveyed and restored, archaeology survey work. It's been a pretty broad brush."

Saginor described how he measures the CPA's success.

"Not one community that as adopted it has ever left the program," he said. "It's done tremendous things for the quality of life in many communities."

Lawmaker looks to add CPA sunset clause

Bill would require taxpayers reaffirm surcharge every 5 years

By Erin Tiernan
etiernan@wickedlocal.com

Since 2001 in Massachusetts, 161 cities and towns have adopted the Community Preservation Act and most have never looked back.

The law enables municipalities to place a surcharge on property taxes of up to 3 percent. That money must be used on community preservation-oriented projects related to open space, historic preservation, recreation or affordable housing. Advocates of the law say these are projects that are likely to be neglected or passed over in an era where local spending is tight, but opponents argue it is just another tax homeowners can't afford.

Don Mauch of Norwell, where property owners have paid the full 3 percent surcharge on their tax bills since 2002, said its time to give residents the chance to change their minds.

"I voted for the CPA when it was proposed in Norwell. I support the CPA, but what I don't support is maintaining a fund so flushed with money that they've started to create and think up ways to spend it," he said.

Mauch has lobbied for both a full revocation and a reduction in the surcharge local homeowners pay toward the CPA initiative at Norwell Town Meeting this May and over the past several years. Both measures failed.

"The bottom line is if people vote for a tax increase for good purpose, they should be able to vote for a tax decrease as well," Mauch said.

South Shore legislator Rep. David DeCoste, R-Norwell, filed a piece of legislation last August that would require voters to re-accept the provisions of Chapter 44B, the Community Preservation Act, once every five years from the date of its original acceptance.

"This would provide people an opportunity to re-affirm their support or indicate a lack of support for this piece of legislation," he said of the bill, noting that local election were the obvious time to gauge taxpayer support on such issues.

Currently once a community opts into the CPA, to revoke it, the measure must pass by a two-thirds majority at Town Meeting as well as on the local ballot.

"To revoke it is a two-step process. The same process used to adopt it is used to revoke it," Katherine Roth, coalition Associate Director, said.

In the 16 years since the bill became law, just under half of the communities in the state have opted into the Community Preservation Act. None have repealed the surcharge, but a handful of communities have voted to reduce it. Four have voted to increase their surcharge, according to the Community Preservation Coalition.

DeCoste, who worked with Citizens for Limited Taxation to draft the bill, called it a "sunset provision" and said he believes taxpayers should have the opportunity to evaluate and weigh in on whether laws are still working for them or their community.

"I think the commonwealth would run a lot more efficiently on both the local and state level if voters had to re-validate laws," he said.

The Joint Committee on Municipalities and Regional Government conducted a hearing on the bill on June 14 in which they heard testimony on both sides of the issue.

DeCoste expects the committee to make a decision to bring it to the floor for a vote before the end of the legislative session this month.

COMMUNITY PRESERVATION COMMITTEE

Town board vets CPA projects for taxpayers

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Community Preservation Committee meetings are often among the most popular in town because they have money to help pay for a range of projects and plans that otherwise might not see the light of day if left up to the municipality's regular budget process.

But what some citizens may not realize is that the makeup of the committees, dubbed CPCs, is part of the Community Preservation Act statute. There are five required members of a CPC: one each from the Conservation Commission, Planning Board, Historical Commission, Housing Authority and Recreation Commission. A municipality may also have up to four additional "at-large" members.

Katherine Roth, Associate Director of the Community Preservation Coalition that provides guidance for municipalities that have adopted the CPA, says while the job of the CPC — that includes reviewing all proposals for preservation funding is important — well prepared applicants can also play a significant role by creating enthusiasm for a proposal.

"There are a lot of moving pieces to the CPA," Roth points out.

Each community that adopts the Community Preservation Act is required to establish a CPC to administer the program. The CPC is required to hold at least one public hearing annually to get input from the general public and to develop a local CPA plan to guide the decision-making process. The plan can be an informal one and can be cobbled together from existing open space or master plans, Roth says.

Russ Bonetti, who has been chairman of the Cohasset CPC for five years, believes part of the success of his committee has been outreach. He believes in getting the word out about upcoming meetings and projects and asks his fellow CPC members to engage with the community and encourage proposals.

Bonetti says being chairman of a CPC is not always an easy role because while those, who benefit from preservation monies praise the program — those who are not happy with the program or expenditures have no qualms in sharing their objections.

The Community

Preservation Coalition provides technical assistance to CPCs through its hotline and can direct CPCs to additional resources if needed, said Roth, who notes that the CPA is a law that is open to interpretation. Most CPCs use their municipality's town counsel for legal questions and to help determine if a project can qualify for funding, she said.

Karen Connolly, chairman of the Scituate CPC, said the CPC looks at all applications that come before them to see if they fit the criteria under the CPA guidelines. "We ask questions, study applications and look at the budget," she said.

Ultimately Town Meeting has the final say on whether to approve recommendations from the CPC and that is how it should be, Connolly said. The CPC votes on projects to recommend to Town Meeting (or City Council) along with the specific dollar amounts and the CPA funding sources needed.

"This is not money that comes out of nowhere," Connolly said. "It is taxpayer money."

"It is my belief that the CPC acts on behalf of the taxpayers to bring the best proposals before them."

Williamsport team ready to roll

Cohasset to host opening round game June 27

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

It isn't hard to understand why members of the Cohasset Williamsport Little League Tournament baseball team are excited about the upcoming District 8 tournament that starts Monday, June 27.

The initial excitement is because this is a team that feels pretty good about themselves, and the opportunity to showcase their hard work in front of a home crowd with that opening game at 6 p.m. at Barnes Field against Avon/Holbrook.

"It feels good to be selected. It's an honor and privilege to play on this team. I love baseball. I hope I make the high school team one day."

— Anthony Inferrera, Pitcher & right fielder

"We hope to have a huge crowd," Cohasset head coach Tony Talacci said.

Justin Appleby, a catcher and shortstop, has been an All-Star before. He said this team has high hopes.

"We hope to make it through the District Finals," he said.

Rough start

Post 118 looking for a few breaks in second half

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The hope is that things can turn around in the second half of the season for the Cohasset/Scituate American Legion Post 118 Baseball team.

Post 118 has battled in the first half of the Zone 6 East season, but have not had success win-loss wise.

"We have had some tough luck so far," Cohasset coach Darren Souza said about his team's 0-8 start. "We have a quality group of kids. They are all varsity starting caliber in their programs. They have played hard and we have had some really competitive games. We are still trying to find a way to put it together."

They have had four losses that have been by three or less runs in their first eight games.

Souza has a number of high school programs to build from as Post 118 has had each year.

"There is a little bit of a problem in putting things together," Souza said. "Every legion program has that same challenge. There are benefits to that

PLYMOUTH PILGRIMS

Pilgrims struggle at the start

By David Wolcott
dwolcott@wickedlocal.com

PLYMOUTH - After a full week of play, the Plymouth Pilgrims find themselves looking up at the rest of the Southern Division squads in the New England Collegiate Baseball League.

After winning three of their first four games, Plymouth entered play Monday having lost five in a row for an overall record of 3-6.

Ocean State is off to an 8-2 start to lead the Southern Division. Danbury (6-4), Newport (5-4), Mystic (4-6), Plymouth and then New Bedford (1-7) fill out the rest of the bracket going into Monday night's slate of games.

Johnny Balsamo (University of Missouri) found his way into four games for Plymouth so far and leads the team in hitting with a batting average of .375. Catcher Chris Corbett (Rollins College) played in all nine games, and he's hitting an even .300. Michael DeRenzi, a sophomore outfielder from Georgetown University, is hitting .296 and slugged two of the Pilgrims' three home runs.

Cole Bartlett (University of Missouri) won both of his starts this season, striking out 11 in 10 innings of work. Second-year reliever Vincenzo Aiello (Rider University) notched saves in two of the team's three wins so far.

Plymouth suffered a tough loss at Forges Field Friday night, dropping a 1-0 decision to Ocean State. Alex Holderbach walked and came around to score in the top of the second for the only run of the game.

The Pilgrims could not take advantage of six Ocean State walks, leaving 10 men on base. Four Ocean State pitchers combined to limit Plymouth to three hits.

Saturday night was no easier for the Pilgrims as they dropped a 4-1 contest to the Mystic Schooners to extend their losing streak to five games. Damon Haecker (Auburn) drove in Plymouth's lone run with a sacrifice fly.

Mystic could only muster four hits off five Plymouth pitchers, but homers by Chase Lunsford (Louisiana Tech) and Zach Goldstein (Southern New Hampshire) set the Schooners on course for the division win.

Plymouth started this week on the road with games at Newport Monday and then North Adams Tuesday. The busy week continued back on the home diamond at Forges Field Wednesday with a 6:30 p.m. game against Sanford. Thursday will find Plymouth at Winnepesaukee, Friday night brings a home game against New Bedford, and they hit the road again Saturday for a game with Ocean State.

USA HOCKEY

Evaluation camp invitees announced

Scituate's Greg Brown on coaching staff

Forty-Two players invited to 2016 USA Hockey National Junior Evaluation Camp Support Staff Also Named; Knuble, Rolston Named Guest Camp Coaches

USA Hockey announced Tuesday June 21 the 42 players that have been invited to the USA Hockey National Junior Evaluation Camp, July 30-Aug. 7, at USA Hockey Arena in Plymouth, Michigan. The players will audition for a spot on the U.S. National Junior Team that will take part in the 2017 International Ice Hockey Federation World Junior Championship, December 26, 2016, through January 5, 2017, in Montreal and Toronto, Canada.

Bob Motzko (St. Cloud, Minn.) is the head coach of the 2017 U.S. National Junior Team. The assistant coaches for Team USA are Greg Brown (Scituate, Mass.), Kris Mayotte (Pittsburgh, Pa.), Steve Miller (Colorado Springs, Colo.) and Grant Potulny (Minneapolis, Minn.). Of the 42 players attending, five are returnees from last year's U.S. National Junior Team that claimed the bronze medal at the 2016 IIHF World Junior Championship in Helsinki, Finland. Additionally, 31 players have won medals at IIHF events.

The United States, which has medaled in four of the last seven IIHF World Junior Championships (gold - 2010, 2013; bronze

- 2011, 2016), aims to claim back-to-back medal finishes for the second time ever (2010 - gold, 2011 - bronze).

The week-long camp will include 10 international competitions between Canada, Finland, Sweden and the United States.

USA Hockey also announced today its support staff for the 2017 U.S. National Junior Team, including equipment managers Scott Aldrich (USA Hockey/Colorado Springs, Colo.) and Joe Guilmet (Arizona State University/San Diego, Calif.); athletic trainers Jason Hodges (USA Hockey National Team Development Program/New Baltimore, Mich.) and Stan Wong (USA Hockey/Boca Raton, Fla.); team physician Dr. Phil Johnson (USA Hockey/Fargo, N.D.); and communications contact Jon Gomez (USA Hockey/Colorado Springs, Colo.).

Knuble, Rolston to serve as guest camp coaches Mike Knuble (East Grand Rapids, Mich.) and Ron Rolston (Fenton, Mich.) will serve as guest coaches at the 2016 USA Hockey National Junior Evaluation Camp.

A Stanley Cup champion with the Detroit Red Wings and veteran of 1,068 NHL games, Knuble skated for Team USA on five occasions, including four U.S. Men's National Teams (1995, 1999, 2001, 2005) and the 2006 U.S. Olympic Men's Ice Hockey Team. Rolston, who spent seven seasons (2004-11) as head coach with USA Hockey's National Team Development Program, most recently served as head coach of the AHL's Springfield Falcons. He is the only coach in U.S. history to guide the U.S. Men's National Under-18 Team to three gold medal finishes at the IIHF Men's Under-18 World Championship (2005, 2009, 2011).

Visit teamusa.usahockey.com/worldjuniors for more information Luke Opilka (St. Louis, Mo.), who participated in last year's camp, and forward Colin White (Hanover, Mass.), who served as an alternate captain for the 2016 U.S. National Junior Team, will both miss camp due to injury.

Additionally, three former U.S. National Junior

Team players eligible for the 2017 U.S. National Junior Team will not be part of the camp, including forward Auston Matthews (Scottsdale, Ariz.) and defenseman Noah Hanifin (Norwood, Mass.) and Zach Werenski (Grosse Pointe Woods, Mich.). Werenski served as captain of the 2016 U.S. National Junior Team while Matthews was an alternate captain.

Hanifin was a member of the 2015 U.S. National Junior Team. Of the 42 players invited to the USA Hockey National Junior Evaluation Camp, 28 are eligible for the 2016 NHL Entry Draft, which begins Friday (June 24). Fourteen players invited competed in the United States Hockey League during the 2015-16 season, including 11 from USA Hockey's National Team Development Program.

Sixteen players spent time in the college hockey ranks last season while another 14 players are expected to make their collegiate debuts this season. Eleven of the 42 players participated in last year's camp.

Bring it on.

Getting back to baseball, it was good to watch the Cohasset/Scituate American Legion Post 118 team play Monday.

There's something special about the Legion season, especially when it gets later in the season, and in some ways even more when it comes to teams that aren't necessarily winning games but are still heading to the ballfield just about every day and on the weekends.

These are the guys I know love baseball and just love to play, and I am always one to enjoy that.

It was good to meet the kids of the Williamsport team Wednesday. I love the enthusiasm the youngsters bring to the field.

Good luck Monday.

Must say I'm pretty bummed about my Hurricanes at the College World Series.

I thought this might be the year to really make a run at a title, but instead it was two-and-out.

Still don't know what to make of the Red Sox this season. I have to admit that I cut the cord on TV a few years ago and only saw the Sox play on national games and radio, and following the highlights online and the news. Having lived out of state a long time, I was pretty much used to it.

These days I'm back and loving it all over, especially the Sox in 2 at midnight when I get the TV to myself.

The only downer is the thought that when the game is down to the ninth inning and the Sox are down a run or two, if its too close to 2 a.m., the result is pretty much not in doubt. Just happened with the White Sox. Oh well.

too, because you get some depth at certain positions. We have players in the program that are going to go on and play in college. It makes it exciting, but we have to get some wins."

Cohasset will battle in the second half of the season, but they also have three games with Braintree, which is coming off its second straight Super Eight title.

There are a number of very talented teams besides Braintree in Zone 6 East.

"Braintree, Morrisette and Milton are traditionally Big 3 in the zone," Souza said. "Weymouth is a tough team and they have played very well in the two games that we have played against them so far. Their kids have made plays. The teams come to play. This district is very tough and you have to come ready to play."

Souza has a number of talented players that are key to the team.

"Everyone is contributing so far this season," Souza said. "We are pretty strong up the middle with Tim Chase at shortstop. He has had a great start to the season. He played at Archbishop Williams and he has done a great job for us. Bill DeCoste, a BC High kid, he was injured for the Spring, he had a great start for us offensively. Graham McCosker is back and he is going to play at Hamilton next year. Zack Chase is going to play baseball at Norwich and he has hit the ball on the button every single time for us. From Scituate, we have Scott Arnold, he has done a great job behind the plate. Liam O'Connell is back for us, he was one of Cohasset's star players. Nate Ryan has pitched very well for us. Everyone is contributing at this point and everyone is getting innings."

YOUTH

"Last time we won one game against Weymouth. I think we're better than last year. We're a good team."

Appleby likes his team's offense.

"We hit and get on base," he said. "That's a strong point. My older brother Ian played on the team that went to the District Final two years ago. We really want to do that too."

David McSweeney plays first base, outfield and pitches. He is enjoying the experience of working to come together as a team.

"I am enjoying it," he said. "I'm noticing the differences between spring and this league. My team didn't hit as well in the spring. Here we make a lot of contact."

Pitcher, right fielder Anthony Inferrera was happy to be selected to the team.

"It feels good to be selected," he said. "It's an honor and privilege to play on this team."

Inferrera is the type of player who loves playing.

"I love baseball," he said. "I hope I make the high school team one day."

Inferrera has played on Cohasset travel team before. He knows the tournament is going to be tough.

"The travel is fun," he said. "There are going to be some hard teams there."

First baseman Nick Henry is excited.

"The best part of the team is showing pride and competing with some great players," he said sounding like a veteran pro. "It's a chance to put the work you've done for years into a tournament."

Outfielder Alex Norgeot is expecting to work hard.

"As a player my strength is fielding," he said. "I'm expecting to work hard. I expect tough coaches. I've never had tough coaches before. I'm having a lot of fun."

Danny Talacci is a second baseman and catcher. He's ready to roll.

"I'm excited," he said. "The most fun thing is the mystery of it. Every team is better than the one you played before, but you haven't seen them, so you don't know what to expect."

Talacci likes having a home game to start things out.

"Playing here is going to be great," he said. "You don't have to travel and you get the home field advantage. We'll have our fans here and we get to bat last."

Third baseman/outfielder Ryan Madden just loves baseball.

"My favorite part of baseball ... everything," Madden said. "For me, my fielding is strongest."

As for his favorite pro, Madden said Clayton Kershaw is the guy. He also likes David Ortiz.

Collin Madden said he's excited about the tournament, and hopes to pitch.

The rest of the team is center fielder/first baseman Justin Froio, shortstop/left fielder Jackson Soderberg, shortstop Cam Albanese, pitcher/first baseman Matthew Keene (nicknamed by his teammates Keene Machine) and third baseman Lucas Najjar.

Tony Talacci said lots of work has gone into getting the kids ready to go and wanted to be sure to thank the many who lent a hand.

"Brian Dunkelberger set up scrimmages with the Junior League," he said. "Bobby Barrow has boundless energy. He's a pitching machine. He throws batting practice and tutors kids in town on pitching and hitting.

He's Cohasset's baseball guru. Rob McCunney came back from college (he played at BC High and Fordham) to help. We also want to thank Ian Appleby. He played on the team that went to the District Finals a few years ago. He's helping out. Michael Milanowski is a freshman with the high school varsity. He's been working with our catchers. We also really have to thank Kathrine Ronan. She's our team coordinator. She does all the paperwork and keeps everything together."

The coaching staff is Talacci, Mark Keene, Jim Soderberg and Greg Albanese, who has also been helping out.

After Monday's home game, Cohasset will play again July 2 at 12 p.m. at Hanover's Forge Pond Park, taking on Abington.

The third game of the tournament is at Hanson July 7 at 8 p.m.

Tony Talacci said he's hoping to get solid pitching.

"Pitching is going to have to be a strength," he said. "We have three guys who can pitch at any time. Keene, Inferrera and (Collin) Madden can all give us innings. We also have nine solid players at all positions and backups who can come in at any time."

What Your New SAT Scores Mean

Understanding your scores

When the first batch of scores for the new SAT came out last month, the news looked good. After years of stagnation, the average scores on both the Math and the Evidence-Based Reading and Writing sections were up about 40 points. Unfortunately, scores crept up not because students were brighter or the test better matched what they were learning in school. The average scores rose because this is a different test. What does this mean for students and their families?

All in all, not much has really changed about what students should do when it comes to college admissions. Take tough classes, earn good grades, and get ready for the SAT (or the ACT). The SAT still matters for admission to most colleges, and the variations in scores are not so large that they will affect most students other than those applying to highly selective schools (e.g., Harvard, Amherst, MIT).

Not everything about SAT scores matters, however. The new SAT score report is as loaded up with unwanted offerings as your typical TV cable package, so the trick is to figure out which of the 18 (yes, 18) scores on the score report matter to colleges and, thus, to you.

At the top of the score report are the two most important scores: the Evidence Based Reading and Writing (EBRW) and Math section scores, which are scaled between 200 and 800. Focus less on the percentiles, which are especially confusing this year since there are two of them. Most colleges will not look at percentiles but at the concordance table, available on the College Board website, that lets them compare new SAT scores to old ones.

Next in importance are the three test scores: one each for Reading, Writing and Language, and Math. The Math score contains no new information. Ignore it. The other two scores are helpful because they will help you decide where to focus your attention if you want to improve the EBRW score, which is derived by combining the Reading and Writing and Language scores.

All the other stuff—subscores, cross test scores, and, benchmarks—is noise and can be ignored. The essay is brand new, and essay scores have not been assigned a percentile ranking. As a result, no one but College Board knows what a good score on the essay is, and, so far, they're not sharing that information, which means that, essay scores will almost certainly have no impact on your chance of admission, even though it is required at some schools.

Perhaps the most important thing to say about the new SAT is that it remains a timed, multiple-choice, high-stakes test, which means that you can and probably should prepare for it. Whether you use the free resources available, take a course, or work one-on-one with a tutor, you will want to get to know the test and how to beat it under the pressure of test day. Figuring out the next step in the preparation process can be challenging, so please call your local Princeton Review office for a free consultation with a test prep expert who can advise you on what to do next.

FEAST FOR THE SENSES

ARTS FESTIVAL

Katie DiTolla, of Braintree, gets her daughter, Ellie, 4, ready to sell strawberry shortcakes while Ayla Duncanson, 10, of Cohasset places her button in place during the South Shore Arts Center's annual Arts Festival on Saturday, June 18.

Carrie Jones, of Hanover, smiles while chatting with Geraldo De-Souza, of Everyday Bowties, who got into the bowtie business after a tumor was found on his spine and he finally realized that he wanted to "work for love."

The Infracctions perform underneath First Parish Unitarian Church during the South Shore Arts Center's annual Arts Festival on Saturday.

Becky Wright, of Becky Wright Pottery, in South Portland, Maine is framed by her work while doing some paperwork.

William Kaplan, 7, of Scituate, decorates his plane made out of clothespins in the Kids tent.

Hamilton is a popular figure right now, as he is the subject of this painting by Judy St. Peter, of Hingham.

Jeannie Hickey, of Hanover, is framed by the "Wishing Wheel" by Bill Chisholm, of Somerville, while she was shopping for art.

Leah Grady, 8, of Hull and Chloe Davis, 8, of Cohasset, make colorful twine that will be woven into a fabric while learning how to weave.

Sophia Tam, 5, of Cohasset, is in a patriotic spirit while holding the flag and sporting a tie-dye flower in her hair.

"Ginger", who is owned by Claire Hagerty, of Pawtucket, RI, has a taste for popcorn while enjoying the food offerings.

Tony Rocks, of the Infracctions, smiles during their show.

Mary Zandbergen, 4, of Hingham, dances gleefully to the music of the Infracctions.

Sandra Coughlin of Cohasset checks out art on display in the main tent, including this piece called, In the Stars, by Desmond Herzfelder.

Afternoon light causes glass vases from End of the Day Glass to glow behind the partition.

Hailey Bestick, 15, of Cohasset, makes a tie-dye flower for herself in the kids tent.

Lynn Curry, of Cohasset, feeds her daughter, Eilish, 6, some strawberry shortcake while enjoying music.

Stacey Piwinski of Boston shows Chloe Davis, 8, of Cohasset, how to work a loom while demonstrating the art of weaving.

Debbie Anderson and her daughter, Betsey Niebauer, of Cohasset, make strawberry shortcakes during the Strawberry Festival.

Art imitates life as Tony Sanches, of New Fairfield, Conn., takes a break on the bench as he and his wife, Vicki, check out Vicki's childhood friend's mother's work, Ros Farbush, at her exhibition.

Gabrielle Weissman, right 19, of Cohasset, sells strawberry shortcakes to Rose Coyman, of Boston, and Jane Berkholtz, of Scituate, with the help of Noah Carmody, 11, of Cohasset.

Thursday Summer Concert Series

The 2016 Cohasset Recreation Concert Series on Cohasset Common starts Thursday, June 30th at 6:30 p.m. with a performance by Cohasset's own Rusty Skippers Band (Jack Worley Memorial Veterans Concert). Enjoy a summer night on the Common listening to music that spans from show tunes to patriotic songs in honor of the July 4th weekend!

The Rusty Skipper Band made its debut in 1995 as part of the Cohasset Harborfest, at the enthusiastic suggestion of the late Rev. Ed Atkinson of First Parish in Cohasset. Fourteen adults marched in the parade that first year. Despite Rev. Atkinson's sudden death that summer, or perhaps in his honor, the band continued, and since 1996, the Rusty Skipper Band has grown steadily, in numbers of musicians and performances, as well as in scope and difficulty of music. They remain the quintessential community band.

One of the distinctive features of the band is the varied professional and vocational background of its members, including a Cohasset postal worker, regional bank CEO and president, Stop & Shop clerk, a few lawyers, retired and current teachers, IT manager, full-time mothers, service station owner, hospital administrator, investment manager and so on. They come from all over the South Shore yet have one thing in common, they love to play music. Grab a snack at the Farmer's Market or bring dinner and a blanket or chairs.

Concerts begin at 6 p.m. (except for June 30th) on Cohasset Common and end at approximately 7:45 p.m.

■ Rusty Skippers (Jack

Worley Memorial Veterans Concert) June 30

■ Richie Smith Group (Sponsored by Fleming's): July 7

■ Studio Two - Beatles Tribute (Sponsored by the McMorris Family): July 14

■ Mark & Wendy: July 21

■ Billy & the Goats: July 28

■ The Armstrong Brothers Band: August 4

■ Wheelhouse Rodeo: August 11

The series, is funded in part through the generosity of the South Shore

Playhouse Associates, Inc. This program is also supported in part by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local agency that is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

All performances are free, open to the public and handicap accessible. Bring a blanket or folding chairs. It's a great time for the whole family. Grab a snack or dinner at the Farmer's Market and listen to some great live music. Visit cohasstetrec.com

Traffic Safety Tip of the Week

Air bag locations vary depending on your car's year and model. They may be located in the steering wheel, side, knees, curtain, rear seat, etc. Knowing where they are in your car may help lessen the anxiety after they are deployed in a crash. Many drivers and passengers aren't aware that when air bags are activated they send a powder in air that many mistake for a smoke believing the car is on fire. Nationally, less than 3 percent of all crashes involve fire. COURTESY PHOTO

Road. Caller reported a woman drove up behind her and passed her, swearing and almost hit another car. An area search turned up negative.

Change in focus for interfaith walk

The streets of Quincy were full of walkers and runners on Saturday April 30th as part of Interfaith Social Services 42nd Annual South Shore Walk and 5K Race. Hundreds turned out in a huge show of support to challenge stereotypes and eliminate the stigma associated with mental illness and addiction. This is the first year that the entire focus of the event was aimed at raising awareness about these issues.

This revised focus was well received by the public. This year Interfaith saw a 30 percent increase in the number of walkers and runners participating in the event.

Interfaith's walkathon has become an annual tradition for many South Shore residents. In addition to the Walk and 5K Interfaith hosts a Family Fun Celebration as part of the festivities. Activities included: kids' games, face painting, music, raffles, and much more. Stars on Hingham Harbor donated sandwich wraps for all of the participants and New England Ice Cream donated frozen treats for the hundreds of walkers and runners.

Interfaith Social Services, based in Quincy, operates one of the largest emergency food pantries in Greater Boston. Their programs also focus on mental health counseling, addiction recovery and emergency assistance. All of the funds raised via The South Shore Walk and 5K Race support Interfaith's New Directions Counseling Center. Anyone who is struggling and looking for help can get more information at: Interfaith-SocialServices.org.

Front and center Patrick Buchanan of Cohasset, along with Erik Gustafson of Quincy and Kevin Clow of Hingham, are geared up at the start line of Interfaith Social Services' South Shore Walk & 5K Race on Saturday April 30th. Patrick Buchanan is one of Interfaith's Board members, Kevin Clow serves on Interfaith's Feed the Hungry Gala event committee and Erik Gustafson came in 2nd place overall in the 5k's men's division. ### ACTIVITIES AT STATE PARK THIS WEEK

The Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation offers free events at Wompatuck State Park to engage and educate visitors. Programs are offered every week through the summer.

Unless otherwise specified, all programs meet at the Visitor Center, 204 Union St., Hingham. Dress for the weather, with comfortable and sensible walking shoes and bring water, a snack, sunscreen and bug spray. All children must be accompanied by an adult. Programs may be cancelled in the event of rain. Call to confirm: 781-749-7160. Reasonable accommodations available upon advance request. See the DCR Events Calendar at mass.gov.

KIDS' INSPECTION TEAMS FOR THE ENVIRONMENT, KITES: 2 to 3:30 p.m. June 24. Explore a little-known site from Wompatuck's military past and learn how people can affect the environment. Visitors will be a team of environmental investigators assessing a potential hazardous waste site. Evaluate for signs of dumping liquid waste and other signs of harmful human activity in an area southeast of the Navy's Mine Assembly Facility and examine the likely impact on water resources. This program begins at the Campground Contact Station; it's intended for adults and children 10 and older. The program may be canceled or modified due to weather.

BIKING THROUGH WOMPATUCK'S COLD WAR PAST: 2 to 3:30 p.m. June 25. During the Cold War, the Navy used this land, then called the Hingham Naval Ammunition Depot Annex, for ammunition storage and assembly. The site includes the remains of bunkers and assembly buildings, a rocket engine test site with blast deflectors, old fire hydrants and traces of the rail lines that moved munitions and supplies between the bunkers and ships in the harbor. Trail is moderately challenging and intended for adults and children 10 and older. Children must be accompanied by an adult. Visitors must bring their own bicycles and wear bike helmets — no exceptions. Young children in carriers, wearing bike helmets, are also welcome. The program may be canceled or modified due to weather.

TELLING THE STORIES OF JUNK: 2 to 3:30 p.m. June 26. In this short hike, participants will visit a nearby site, such as the Old Grigsby Estate or the N2 quarry, that shows signs of human activity or use, and try to tell what exactly was going on there. This hike is meant for adults and children 8 and older. The program may be canceled or modified due to weather.

HEALTHY HEART WALK: 8-8:45 a.m. June 27. A guided hike on the Healthy Heart Trail. The Healthy Heart Trail is about 1.5 miles long and is marked with green heart symbols. The loop is easy-to-moderate in difficulty and takes about 30 to 45 minutes to complete. This walk is intended for adults and older children. The program may be canceled or modified due to weather.

ROTARY

Local club connects Chapman Farm School

Katy Shamitz, founder and director of The Chapman Farm School in Norwell and a 2015-16 Cohasset and District Rotary grant recipient, met recent speaker, Peter Swanson, founder of 1 Square Foot at a Time, along with his wife, Kathy, both volunteers with Honduras Hope.

Swanson, a retired Quincy high school science teacher, spoke on sharing his passion for gardening with children who become the teachers to their families when they come home with new foods that they have grown and find they enjoy eating fresh from the garden. Swanson teaches how anyone can grow anywhere, with just a few square feet of growing space.

While they are planning and keeping logs of their gardens, they are also learning math, science and english during their calculations and growing seasons. Swanson shares his knowledge in cities and towns in and around the South Shore and Boston.

He and his wife, who is also a retired North Quincy teacher, travel three-to-four times a year to Honduras and have become participant teachers in Honduras Hope, an organization that teaches math, science, nutrition, health and cooking through experiential horticulture learning in the mountains of Honduras.

Kathy Swanson, who is fluent in Spanish, leads the young girls in an Empowering Girls program. Peter Swanson has students planning square foot gardens, collecting rain water through student-created rain gutters and attaching to barrels, they grow worm farms which speeds up their composting, and learn to cook nutritious foods other than their staple of rice, beans and corn.

The learning is done in hands-on, experiential classrooms. The students then bring their knowledge back to their families who live in the mountains of Honduras and teach their parents ways to grow and cook nutritious produce that they too begin to grow.

Cohasset Rotary has partially funded the renovation of a greenhouse and gardens at the East Bridge-water campus of Chapman Farm School to become a science classroom and learn sustainable business practices as they grow and sell vegetables, herbs and create herb soaps. Chapman Farm School uses an integrated project-based curriculum to achieve traditional academic success. In its middle-high school population, it values social understanding, within its neuro-diverse community, as a foundation for comprehension.

Elizabeth Robinson

HINGHAM—Elizabeth Robinson, 99, formerly of Hingham, MA, died peacefully at the home of her niece, Ann Selinger, in Dunstable, MA on June 12, 2016.

She was born in St. Louis, MO and lived in Garden City, NY, West Newton, MA, Denver, CO, Cambridge, MA and settled in Hingham. After a life long career working for the Telephone Company, Elizabeth became interested in painting which became a passion for the rest of her life. After moving to Hingham and retiring, she continued her studies at the South Shore Art Center and eventually took up Chinese brush painting studying under Qingxiong MA.

Elizabeth is survived by her niece and her nephew, Dominic B. Griffin, III of New York City; her great nephew John Selinger and his wife Annika, of Dunstable, and their two daughters, Marta and Isabel; her great niece, Amy Selinger and husband Mark Elefante, of Lexington, and their two daughters, Hannah and Julia; her great niece, Tara Griffin Montague and her husband, Lt. M. Gavan Montague of Takoma Park, MD, and their two sons, Edward and Joseph; and her great nephew, Dominic B. Griffin, IV, his wife Tara Mrowka, of Brooklyn, NY, and their son Henry.

A Funeral Mass will be said on Tuesday, June 21 at 10 am at Sacred Heart Church in Lexington with private burial at Mount Pleasant Cemetery, Arlington, MA.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Vivien E. Bobo

COHASSET — Vivien Elaine Anderson Bobo, age 88, of Cohasset, passed away on May 9, 2016.

Beloved wife of the late Stephen N. Bobo. Devoted mother of Stephen A. Bobo and wife Heidi of Cohasset, and Kristine N. Bobo Specht and husband A. Thomas Specht Jr. Loving grandmother of Samantha Bobo and Julia and Melissa Specht.

Mrs. Bobo was a partner of South Shore Tax Assoc. in Quincy and was an enrolled agent with the IRS. She served as treasurer for the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs and was a member of the Town of Cohasset Advisory Committee for six years.

Mrs. Bobo was member of the Cohasset Yacht Club, the Cohasset Historical Society, where she served on the Board of Directors, as well as the Second Congregational Church, as a member of the Choir and Assistant Treasurer.

She was past president of the Garden Club Federation of Mass. and the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, serving on the Board of Directors of both. She served as a member of the Dressage Foundation Board of Directors, District Director of the Eastern New England US Pony Clubs Region, District Commissioner of the Ponkapoag Pony Club, and secretary of numerous Dressage competitions. Vivien was the first District Director of Region Eight for the US Dressage Federation. She was a life member of the Boston Navigators Club, National Garden Clubs, and Garden Club Federation of Mass. She was a regional master of the American Contract Bridge League and a Master Flower Show Judge for National Garden Clubs.

Vivien was also a professional actress for seven years in New York and she toured with Audrey Hepburn, Jack Lemmon and many others.

A memorial service will be held at a future date.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the 2nd Congregational Church of Cohasset or to Hospice of the South Shore, 30 Reservoir Park Drive, Rockland, MA 02370.

HOLLY HILL

Sustainable Garden Tour is Saturday

Holly Hill Farm is located at 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset: 781-383-6565; hollyhillfarm.org.

THIRD ANNUAL SUSTAINABLE GARDEN TOUR:

10 a.m. to 4 p.m. June 25. Local gardeners from Scituate, Cohasset and Hull will open their gardens to guests. The Tour will focus on sustainable, naturally and organically maintained gardens. See up close how gardeners keep backyard chickens, care for beehives, grow fruit and utilize composting systems that feed their soil. Private homes, educational gardens at Holly Hill Farm, a Food Pantry garden and a Scituate school garden are featured. Tickets are $25 prior to June 25 and $30 the day of the tour. Tickets are available on the website. Attendees may pick up prepaid ticket or purchase in person at Holly Hill Farm beginning June 22. Children 18 and younger are free.

WEED WALK AND TALK: 10 a.m. to noon, June 25: Local herbalist Jessica Grabowski will lead a stroll at Holly Hill Farm. Learn the benefits of many local, common weeds. Learn the nutritional value one can get from freshly picked weeds and adding them to a salad or their medicinal properties that many people overlook. Cost is $12 per person for members, $15 per person for nonmembers.

SUMMER CAMP 2016: The farm has a wide variety of fun, exploratory, creative, intriguing programs for all ages. Kids ages 3 and 4 can taste spinach. Children ages 7 and 8 can spend a morning at the marsh. Preteens ages 9 and 10 can compete in an obstacle course. Teenagers can prepare for an exciting overnight at the Farm. Adults can spend a week honing gardening skills and cooking vegetables for a special Parents Go to Camp, Too program.

HOLLY HILL FARM STAND: 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays, featuring seasonally available organic produce. Now offering greens, arugula, pea shoots, Swiss chard, kale, head lettuce, snap peas and snow peas. For weekly notification of specific produce and other delicious offerings in the Farm Stand, send an email to friendssofhollyhillfarm@gmail.com.

COHASSET FARMER'S MARKET: 2 to 6 p.m. Thursdays, located on Cohasset Common, North Main Street, Cohasset. Holly Hill Farm offers fresh, organically grown produce at the Cohasset Farmer's Market. Many other vendors, local crafts, live music and pony rides. Visit Cohassetfarmersmarket.com.

COMMUNITY SERVICE FOR TEENS:

The Spring Farm to Food Pantry Program is for teenagers aged 13-18. The spring program has begun but we welcome new participants. Complete community service requirements this spring and summer at Holly Hill Farm, growing, harvesting and delivering produce to local food pantries. Program runs every Friday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to noon until mid June when additional summer hours are from 9 a.m. to noon Mondays through Fridays. Contact education director Jon Belber at 781-383-6565 or jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com.

YOGA ON THE FARM: 8 to 9 a.m. June 18, 25, July 9, 16, 23, 30, Aug. 6 and 13. No class on July 2. Linda Storm has been teaching yoga classes at Holly Hill Farm for six years. In this one hour morning class, attendees can begin their

Sudoku

Level: Challenging

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

HOROSCOPE

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You feel ready to face up to a major change, although it might involve some risks. A once-dubious family member comes around and offers support and encouragement.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Move forward with your plans, despite discouraging words from those who underestimate the Bovine's strong will. Your keen instincts will guide you well.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A misunderstanding is easily cleared up. Then go ahead and enjoy some fun and games this week. A Libra might have ideas that merit serious consideration for the future.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might feel as if you're in an emotional pressure cooker, but the situation is about to change in your favor. Take time out for some well-earned fun.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A shift in your workplace responsibilities creates resentment among some co-workers. Deal with it before it becomes a threat to your success on the job.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Expect some surprises in what you thought was one of your typically well-planned schedules. Deal with them, and then enjoy some lighthearted entertainment.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Be careful: What appears to be a solid financial opportunity might have some hidden risks attached. A hazy personal matter needs to be cleared up.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It's a good time to strengthen ties with family and friends. You might feel unsure about a recent workplace decision, but time will prove you did the right thing.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Just when you thought your relationship was comfortable and even predictable, your partner or spouse could spring a potentially life-changing surprise on you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your usually generous self is overshadowed by your equally strong suspicious nature. You might be judging things too harshly. Keep an open mind.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Love and romance dominate the week. Married Aquarians enjoy domestic harmony, while singles could soon be welcoming overtures from loving Leos.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An old health problem recurs, but it is soon dealt with, leaving you eager to get back into the swing of things. A favorable travel period starts this week.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an independent spirit that resists being told what to do. But you're also wise enough to appreciate good advice.

HOW TO SUBMIT YOUR CALENDAR EVENT

Here are some tips on getting your event information posted to the Wicked Local calendar and included in this regional calendar:

REGISTER: Find the Events Calendar on your Wicked Local homepage in the bottom right portion of the website and click on the Add Event button. Click the Register link in the top right hand corner of your calendar page, above Add Event. Enter an email address, first name, last name, password, and password confirmation. Once you click "Register," a verification email will be sent to the email address with which you registered. Be sure to confirm your account through that email to complete the process. Once registered, you will have the ability to add events.
ADD AN EVENT: Click the Add Event button. Fill in required fields such as event title, date, time, category, and venue. Events may be set up to repeat daily, weekly, monthly, or by manually adding additional dates.

ADDITIONAL NOTES:

■ The more detail the better in the event description field and there is a section to provide optional contact information.
 ■ Categories are important for tagging events with discoverable search terms and eases a visitor's ability to find the type of events they are looking to attend. An event can have multiple categories.
 ■ Events must be matched to a known venue. You can also add a new venue if your venue is not listed.
 ■ Events are subject to review before appearing on the site.
IMAGES: Make sure to include an image with your event. Events with images command three times the attention than those without. EvieSays uses a simple image uploader with options to drag and drop or browse, so adding images to your event is easy.
